

WILD FLIGHT OF ABDUCTORS ENDS AT TULE

lice here were notified to be on the watch for the pair, giving their car license number.

Under Arrest
Officer Walter Walker spent Tuesday, his day off, driving about in his private car looking for the Fosters, and recognized the Foster car parked in front of the county school shops on Summers lane.

Officer Walker got out of his car and approached Foster, who was talking to men at the school shops about obtaining a bus for defense work in Utah. The officer told Foster he was under arrest and started to search him.

Foster's Answer
According to the officer, Foster scuffled with him and picked up a rock. Walker went to his car and obtained a shotgun. Meanwhile, Foster got into his car and locked the doors.

Walker called to him to get out and give up. Foster's answer was to start the car.

"I could have blasted him out of the car, but I did not know the seriousness of the case against him," said Walker. "I did not want to kill him. Instead, I fired at a rear tire, ripping it off the rim."

Led Officer
But the fugitive got underway, despite this handicap, and Walker gave chase.

The flight led out Summers lane to the airport, then to the left to state highway 39, south on 39 to Mack's store. There Foster swung onto the Spring lake road, and by devious back country roads led the pursuing officer to a point near the state line road just south of Merrill.

Slowed Down
Walker said that despite the fact Foster was running on only three tires and a rim, he managed to get a speed up to 60 miles an hour or more. Walker was unarmed except for the shotgun. He frequently ran up close behind Foster, but could not get in front of him on the narrow back roads, and Foster would swerve to prevent the officer heading him. Walker could not stop to shoot, because Foster would immediately run out of range.

This kept up to the point near Merrill, where Walker slowed down when he thought he recognized the car of another state officer. The third car, however, passed Walker, and rolled up the dust between the officer and Foster's car. It was at this time that Walker lost the fugitive, and he drove quickly to Merrill and notified headquarters here.

Suspicion
State policemen from here, headed by Sergeant E. W. Tichenor, went immediately to Tulelake, where they picked up Chief of Police Frank Rhoads, Highway Patrolman Fred Engel, and Deputy Sheriff Roy Dysert. Inquiry at Tulelake disclosed that Mrs. Foster's mother was working at Henzel brothers' Tulana farms at the south end of Tule lake near the west side road. Officers suspected that Foster had been heading in that direction when he fled from Walker, and drove toward Tulana farms.

About two miles from the farm headquarters, they sighted Foster walking on the road. He gave up without resistance.

Taken to Tulelake
The officers then went on to the farm headquarters and picked up Mrs. Foster and the little girl, Sharon.

It was learned they had been taken directly to Tulelake after the flight from Bend and Foster had then, on Tuesday, driven back to Klamath Falls where he met up with Officer Walker and the wild pursuit followed.

Foster told the officers that after shaking off Walker, he had decided to abandon his car and walk on to Tulana farms. He left the car on the state line road, and had walked five or six miles when he was arrested.

Defense Worker
The Fosters waived extradition and with Sharon were brought to Klamath Falls by state police, arriving about 10 p. m. Tuesday. The little girl was taken to Lightfoot hospital and the Fosters were lodged in the county jail.

Foster told the officers he had been working on a defense construction project in Utah. Several months ago he worked on the Japanese relocation project at Newell, near Tulelake, and it was then that he had become familiar with back roads he used in the flight from arrest by Walker. Foster was recalled by the officers at Tulelake and this led to the suspicion he had headed for Tulana farms where his mother-in-law works.

Asked for Child
Sherman Telford, father of two-year-old Sharon, arrived with his wife at 3 o'clock this morning and after contacting city police went directly to Lightfoot hospital where he took the little girl from her bed. The family returned to Bend at 8 o'clock, state police said.

Telford told officers that Sharon's mother, Mary Elizabeth Foster, and her husband, Gene, called at his home Sunday and asked for the child. When Telford refused to let Sharon go with the couple the mother is quoted as saying, "If you don't let me have her I'll get her somehow." At one time, Telford said, the couple asked to take the little girl out to buy her some clothes.

Monday evening the Fosters returned to the house, Telford said. He became suspicious while talking with them in the living room. Suddenly Foster stood up, stretched and lunged at Telford. Both men fought in the house, proceeded out-of-doors where they dealt each other blows. In the meantime, Mrs. Foster grabbed the little girl and ran to the car. A passerby intervened and separated the men and Foster then ran for the car and drove away.

Drove Bus
Telford filed a charge of child stealing against the two in the Bend justice court and bond was set at $2700, officers said. Sheriff McCauley of Deschutes county was expected here today to move the Fosters from the county jail where they were placed immediately after their arrest.

broadcasts said the French fleet was still at Toulon.

Unclear
Petain's exact stand was unclear.

Vichy broadcasts said he remained in his provisional capital as late as 3 p. m., conferring with his lieutenants and with Pierre Laval, his chief of government, who returned to Vichy presumably from a reported conference with Hitler and Mussolini.

Other reports reaching the French frontier suggested variously that he had left Vichy, taking with him Gen. Maxime Weygand, French African commander long regarded as an allied sympathizer, and that he had elected to stay where he was—a virtual prisoner of state.

especially Italy, to heavy attack."

Air attack, for the present, probably. If the north shore of Africa can be wholly taken over by our side, it will open the Mediterranean supply route and obviate the necessity of going clear around the southern tip of Africa.

That, in itself, will be a big gain. In addition, Italy can be pounded from the air from African bases.

CHURCHILL adds that in Britain the church bells, silent since the first invasion threat as their ringing was to have been the signal of an invasion, will be rung next Sunday in celebration of the African victories.

He adds that in due time an invasion of the continent across the channel or the North Sea will follow, but will be delayed until the enemy is more definitely weakened.

He asserts that the present movement is of such magnitude as to result in keeping the promises that were made to Russia.

THE news today sounds ALL GOOD. But remember that much of it is rumor.

Remember also that we are striving above all else for a fast evidence of a "tough scrap." He had both eyes blacked and severe bruises and cuts about the face. In addition to stealing his child, Telford said Foster made off with a $4 cigarette lighter.

Telford and the present Mrs. Foster were divorced some time ago in Bend. Mrs. Telford (now Mrs. Foster) was not present at the divorce proceedings, and Sharon was given into the custody of her father.

hatted men of the 363rd Infantry at Camp White, Medford, a line of olive drab equipment, and the various organizations who made up the first war-time parade since back in '18.

Reviewing the parade was Colonel Charles S. Pettie, commander of the 363rd infantry, who stood at attention on top a jeep as his men marched by.

"I'm mighty proud of my men," Colonel Pettie stated. "They're raw recruits, only been at camp two weeks, but they've got the spirit."

With Col. Pettie was Fred Heilbronner, Chef de Gare of the 40th and 8th and Chief of Police Earl Heuel.

The parade was headed by the colors followed closely by the American Legion drum corps, the 363rd infantry with bayonet-tipped guns strapped across their shoulders. Next came the mechanized unit with Red Cross, Veterans of Foreign Wars, uniformed Klamath police officers and helmeted Police Reserves.

The women's ambulance corps marched precisely in front of the Klamath Union high school band and twirlers with the stirring strains of "The Marine Hymn" played by the red and white bandsters. Pep Peppers were followed by the red-coated Commandos, Girl Scouts, Fairview students and Roosevelt, Fremont and Klamath Union high school entries.

The prime minister said that the German army in France was "as large, apart from the (British) homeland as ours in Britain. . . . It is not so well equipped as the British and American troops but contains many veterans. . . ."

Invasion preparations "have been greatly advanced," he said and:

"Enormous installations have been and are being brought into existence at all our suitable ports."

Highlights
The prime minister's report contained many joyous highlights, among them:

His disclosure that Nazi Field Marshal Rommel's army has suffered a "mortal blow" in Egypt with the loss of at least 59,000 of its men, 500 of its tanks and 1000 of its guns of all types.

"Our casualties were 13,600 of whom 58 per cent were troops from the United Kingdom," the prime minister reported.

Stalin Told
The prime minister disclosed that he informed Stalin on his last visit of the difficulties of a channel landing and the decision to intervene in north Africa.

"Only in this way," he went on, "could we draw the largest number of Germans and pin them to Calais and the coast of France and the low countries."

"We have drawn and kept at least 33 German divisions in the west and a third of the German fighter air force is there, not being used, and a large proportion of the bomber force is not being used to attack us. Why? Because it is being saved up for this very landing if it occurred on the beaches. . . ."

U. S. Convoys Arrive
The Vichy radio declared that there had been no allied landings east of Algiers and that there were no allied military operations as yet in Constantine, the area of East Algeria.

French radio reports continued to emphasize the arrival of American and British convoys in the Mediterranean area, and quoted observers at La Linea, Spain, as saying several thousand British, American and Canadian troops were now at Gibraltar.

Two cruisers, four destroyers and a large transport entered Gibraltar harbor early this morning, joining a battleship, three aircraft carriers, four cruisers, 11 destroyers and five transports already in the harbor and 38 merchant ships in the bay, this report said. Among the merchantmen was the French ship Cauchois.

Casablanca Falls
The collapse of the fight at Casablanca followed the surrender of Algiers on Sunday and the entrance of American troops into Oran yesterday. These were the three chief centers of resistance in Algiers and Morocco.

Tunis Attacked?
It was not known whether any British or American forces had yet succeeded in reaching Tunisia, said the allied spokesman who announced the arrival of German forces there.

The German radio broadcast that American troops began an attack upon Tunis this morning, but this possibly was part of the German effort to justify the axis move into the French protectorate.

The Vichy radio reported only that Tunis had an air raid alarm of an hour and a half this morning after a calm night.

He said that the German movement had "been going on for
