

APPOINTMENT OF BROWN GETS GROUP OKED

Two other matters held the interest of official Washington—the increasingly urgent one of taxes, and a war labor board hearing on the anthracite strike in Pennsylvania.

Something new in way of taxes—a "restraining tax," designed to keep people from spending too much on non-essentials while permitting them to buy a certain amount of goods tax-free—was talked around on Capitol Hill as a possible compromise to overcome the administration's hostility toward a general sales tax.

The reasons for a wildcat strike of 17,000 Pennsylvania anthracite miners are to be explained to the war labor board by a committee of 15 miners. The labor board, which also summoned operators to a public hearing wants to know why the miners "are on strike against the national no-strike policy and against the welfare of the nation in time of war." On the outcome may depend a threatened extension of the walkout, which now centers in Wilkes-Barre.

A conflict which the Pearl Harbor bombing apparently dulled is that over lend-lease, as far as the house foreign affairs committee is concerned at least. An Associated Press poll indicated that a majority of the members would recommend that congress authorize continuance of the program.

The suggested "restraining tax" idea, it was understood, embraces the sales tax principle but would carry exemptions of possibly $500 or so worth of purchases a year.

FOUR MEASURES INTRODUCED IN LEGISLATURE

asked by Snell, waiting for Snell to submit his own bills. Snell's bills to increase monthly old age pensions to $40—they now are $24—and to finance the increase by levying the state excise tax against public utilities are almost ready for introduction. Utilities now are exempt from the tax.

Snell's legal adviser, Wilber Henderson, Portland, said he believes the tax will apply to private powers systems and peoples utility districts, but not to municipal systems, such as those in Eugene.

Both houses, fearing public criticism if they take too many days off, are planning to work Saturday. Early in the session, they ordinarily adjourn from Thursday or Friday until Monday morning.

The house expected to pass and send to the senate this afternoon a bill to extend the life of the state guard until six months after the war. As the law now stands, the guard would be disbanded next Thursday.

Beer Measures The bill also would make it possible for the state guard to have a women's auxiliary, the house military affairs committee having eliminated the word "male" wherever it appears in the bill.

Two beer and wine measures were introduced in the house today—one aimed at preventing the sale of beer and wine in grocery stores, and the other designed to promote the sale of wines made from Oregon fruits and berries.

Rep. Joseph E. Harvey, Portland republican, submitted the bill providing that package store beer and wine licenses shall not be issued to groceries or any other place frequented by women and children.

Rep. H. R. Jones, Salem republican, introduced the measure to allow sale of Oregon natural fruit and berry wines in places where beer is sold over the bar. Wine could be sold by the drink in such places, Jones said. However, entertainment in such places would be confined solely to radio and phonograph music, and dancing would be prohibited.

Recommendation for Salary Boost Came From Budget Group

Recommendations for salary increases for elective county officials came from the county budget committee, and not from the county court, according to County Judge U. E. Reeder, who issued a statement Friday to clear up a misconception concerning the proposed raise in pay.

Though the county court sat in the meeting, it acted as a member of the budget committee, and not officially as the court, he pointed out. Alfred D. Collier, chairman of the county budget committee, presided at the meeting.

Increase in Union Dues Was Last Straw, Report effect January 1 at the direction of the international union, following a convention vote.

This vote was not representative, said Fred Schraeder, chairman of the grievance committee of the South Wilkes-Barre colliery, who testified:

"The biggest majority of locals are unable to send delegates to the convention, because they haven't got the money. We borrowed $100 from a storekeeper to come to Washington today to state our case. We have $1.25 in our treasury. The international has over $6,000,000."

Schraeder said that workers at his colliery had been arguing for a wage increase since last September, and he urged the war labor board to assign someone to examine the pay rolls of the coal company "to see just how much goes to the men." adding: "I had $32 pay last pay day."

AFL PLEDGE BROKEN, CHARGES CIO LEADER

shipyard agreements reached under the old office of production management's shipbuilding stabilization committee. It is not to be confused with the present shipbuilding stabilization committee which was created by Donald Nelson, war production board chairman.

Green Charges

Green said the old committee reached an agreement in December, 1940, under which labor contracts with shipyard workers of the nation were to negotiate by zones. Over CIO protests, the AFL was to conduct the coast meeting which was to set up working standards. Both unions, Green continued, agreed to enter into no negotiations directly with shipyard workers until these standards had been established. March 1, 1941, was the accepted deadline for establishing the standards after which the workers in the yards were to choose their union by vote. The winning union would base contracts on the standards.

He said he was warned by the late Harry A. Farmer, his union's west coast representative, that the AFL was using the meeting to try to negotiate a bargaining agreement with hiring hall provisions.

Klamath County Praised

Hoyt, who was the principal speaker, praised the work of A. M. Collier and Verne Owens here in Klamath county, and added that Klamath was one of the first of Oregon's counties to get into the war bond program effectively. He expressed opinion that in proportion to its industrial population, Klamath is leading all other Oregon counties, and perhaps is first in the nation, in 10 per cent payroll allotments.

Robert S. Farrell, Oregon secretary of state, here with Hoyt in behalf of the war bond effort, spoke briefly of the problems of his office, including applications for automobile licenses, which he said, are approximately 70,000 under a year ago, drivers' licenses, which will have to be renewed this year, and plans for making auto licenses more easily available to the public by getting them on sale in all counties. He complimented the businesslike attitude of the legislature which is just assembling.

Tillotson is Chairman

Mitchell Tillotson, chairman of Rotary's war bond committee, was program chairman for the day and introduced the speakers.

Following the Rotary bond sale program, A. M. Collier announced that the members of the Klamath county court have just invested an additional $100,000 of Klamath county surplus funds in short term bonds and certificates. This purchase will not count against Klamath county's January bond quota, which includes only sales of Series E bonds.

Police Seek Axe-Slayer in Tulsa Killings

Police Chief George Plaine pieced together this account of the Stewart-Green killings from an examination of the apartment:

An intruder forced his way in through a window and battered the women's heads with an axe or hatchet. Then he raped them, leaving their bodies sprawled grotesquely across the bed.

Afterward, the killer ransacked the apartment leaving blood splattered over the bedroom floor and furniture.

over to the WRA, which Senator Johnson (D-Colo.) described as "one of those social experimental agencies." Johnson and other west coast senators said the Japanese were "being pampered," and that there were reports of riotous demonstrations in some of the colonies against the United States, particularly on the anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

No Employment

Johnson said that gymnasiums, bathhouses, schools and other facilities had been built for the Japanese, who are distributed among colonies in California, Wyoming, Idaho, Colorado, Utah, Arkansas and Arizona. Meanwhile, he said, he had been unable to obtain new schoolhouses and sufficient teachers for the citizens of his own state.

Furthermore, members of the committee said, the Japanese, under an executive ruling, could not be employed to work on the projects for their own welfare. Chairman Chandler (D-Ky.) of a subcommittee to investigate camps said his group intended
