Miss Taylor Is Bride

Klamath Girl Weds Guardsman in Ceremony Here

Grace Louise Taylor, daughter of Mrs. May Norton Taylor of 510 North Seventh street, and of Mr. George P. Taylor of Portland, became the bride of James Elliott Griggs, yeoman second class reserve of the United States coast guards, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Griggs of Bradenton, Florida, in a candlelight ceremony read Sunday evening, January the seventeenth, at six o'clock at the Klamath Revival Center in the presence of relatives and a large group of friends. The double ring ceremony was recited by the Rev. Warren D. Combs, former schoolmate of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white taffeta wedding gown trimmed in gold with a white gardenia corsage at the shoulder. Her long, flowing veil was held by a small wreath of white carnations. She was attended by Miss Patricia Jordan, maid-of-honor, and Misses Bonnie and Eleanor McCool, the bridesmaids. The bride's attendants carried bouquets of carnations.

The groom, in his coast guard dress uniform, was attended by Private Frank Cress of Fort Benning, Georgia as the best man, and by Marvin Jacobson and Adrian Wanser as the groomsmen.

The flower girl was the young Miss Carol Bouman, while the ring-bearer was the young Mr. Richard McCool.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Patricia Jordan sang "I Love You Truly," and Mrs. Rollin Cantrall sang "O Promise Me."

Vows were exchanged before a large red and silver heart.
