Advice Pours in On Owner of Early Rising Rooster

GRESHAM, Feb. 1 (AP)—Emery C. Peterson, Gresham barber and poultry fancier, has received advice from all sections of the country since he told about his newly arrived Iowa rooster that crows at 4 a. m., central war time—two hours too early in these parts.

He says he is going to try this suggestion of an anonymous Kenmore, Wash., resident:

"Do not chop off the head of the early crowing rooster. Just place a piece of one-quarter inch plywood above the roost so that when your fancy rooster attempts to crow he will bump his head on the board. I'll guarantee that you won't be bothered with any more early morning crowing."

OH, WELL—KANSAS CITY, (AP)—He wanted to go to California, the prospective but reluctant juror telephoned Judge Paul A. Buzard. "All right," said the judge. "But I warn you, an investigator will be at your home this week to see if you really have gone on this trip—"

"Well, judge," sighed the unidentified voice, "maybe you'd better just forget the whole thing. I didn't want to make that trip anyway."
