

Plans Made for Concert Campaign

Need for Music in Second War-Time Season Stressed as Drive Slated March Seventh

Throughout the nation there has been a definite trend toward music, especially good music, which will be heard this second war-time musical season. In Klamath Falls the members of the Klamath Community Concert association are making plans for an even better season than the one which will end with Helen Jepson's appearance here in March.

Nations on the firing line of civilization are promoting music as never before. For one reason only, according to the authorities, and that is that in time of war, especially all-out war, music is a path to happiness, it restores courage and it broadens horizons. They know that especially in war time, taking England and Russia as examples, that the home front and the battle front are one, and music not only maintains morale but it builds moral fibre.

Date of the next concert drive has been set for Sunday, March seventh, when the annual workers' dinner will be held. This is two days after the Jepson concert, slated for Friday, March fifth.

Heading the 1943-44 artists is a group of four who will make up a quartet of music masters. They include Nino Martini, Igor Gorin, Josephine Tuminia and Helen Olheim.

Martini is back for his ninth season at the Metropolitan singing greater than ever. In his recitals the tenor is popular as ever.

Igor Gorin is one of the concert stages greatest baritone and is a favorite with both discriminating music lovers and unsophisticated entertainment seekers.

Helen Olheim, mezzo-soprano, and Josephine Tuminia, brilliant young coloratura, complete the quartet which will be on tour from coast to coast this coming year. Klamath Falls is indeed fortunate in its anticipation of these four.

Members of the Klamath association are asked to sign the night of the Jepson concert in order to alleviate work of those on the membership committee as many are detailed to rationing boards and other war time duties.
