

AIR CORPS MEN TOUR LOGGING CAMPS OF NW

Carrying to the loggers in the forests of the Pacific Northwest a message from the front fighting lines of the vital importance of lumber to the army, navy and marine corps, three veteran officers of the air corps today began a three week tour of Oregon and Washington camps with meetings in Aberdeen and Melbourne.

The officers were Lieutenant Colonel Charles W. Kerwood, who flew with the Lafayette and was captured in the last war, and later saw service in Russia, the Balkans, the Greek Royal Air Force, South America and was one time commander of the Sultan of Morocco's Escadrille de la Garde Cherie; Major William J. Daley, 23, one of the youngest majors in the air corps with 22 months of volunteer fighting with the RAF and a number of planes to his credit; and Lieutenant Edwin Dale Taylor, 24, also with 22 months with the RAF, wounded and with several enemy planes to his credit.

Direct Use

"We intend to carry to the men working in the logging camps of this region the appreciation of the men in the fighting forces and tell them of the essential uses to which the wood from the trees they are felling is being put," Colonel Kerwood stated.

"Many do not realize that nine out of every 10 feet of lumber that is being cut goes directly to the army or navy. We need 2000 board feet for every soldier for housing."

Not Replaceable

"The armed forces have 1200 uses for wood. Some of our American planes need 40,000 surface feet, every 35,000-ton battleship uses 300,000 board feet. Lumber as a substitute for steel is already saving 250,000 tons of steel a year."

"Loggers with their special skills are not replaceable. There is no job for them out where the fighting is that is nearly as important as the one they are doing here at home. We have come to tell them just that, to tell them that we appreciate it and are glad they are giving their best."

THREE-WAY SERVICE

KEARNS, Utah, (P)—Sgt. Leroy Manning of the air forces basic training center, reporting: "Sir, I told a guy to get a broom and sweep the kitchen. I saw him go outside, but just then he walked out of a closet right beside me."

"I asked if he intended to get that broom. He looked a little strange and said yes sir, and went into the storage room."

"Then I walked across the kitchen and there sits the guy eating a sandwich..."

"Everything's all right, sergeant," interrupted the lieutenant. "That was Bob, Bill and Henry Aldinger. They're triplets."

Grocer in Row Over Rationing

More rationing trouble. Benjamin H. Holmes, seated, is shown with Indiana State Trooper John Hatch as Holmes, an Elwood, Ind., grocer, allegedly signed a statement he made of his shooting of Morris Solomon following an argument over rationing.

Signing Up for Ration Books Has Its Problems

By The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 26 (P)—Teachers at St. John Hay school were amazed by one man who came to register for war ration book No. 2. He produced four No. 1 books belonging to himself, his wife and their two children. There wasn't a coupon torn out of any one of the books.

"Don't you use sugar?" a teacher asked him.

"Nope, never use it," he replied.

"How about coffee?" he was asked.

"Never touch the stuff," he said.

"Shoes?"

"Those we have are still good," he said.

He got his No. 2 books without any trouble. The teachers wonder if his family uses canned goods.

TOPEKA, Kas., Feb. 26 (P)—The man was pretty wrathful about the whole business, by the time he left the food rationing registration headquarters.

He had tried to get three No. 2 books, to go with his three sugar books.

The registrars let him have only one No. 2 book—and they took away two of his No. 1 books.

"Why I went to three different schools to get those sugar books!" he protested.

PENDLETON, Ore., Feb. 26 (P)—A food-rationing registrar reports one complaint.

A farmer, in his 70's, declared:

"They're just trying to make me eat all these things on the list, and I don't like some of 'em!"

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Feb. 26 (P)—The mailman, unwittingly, is going to get a Los Angeles motorist into a lot of trouble.

Ben Mathews, chairman of the rationing board, opened a letter from Los Angeles. Four C-book coupons fell out of the envelope, which re-examination disclosed had been mislaid to Mathews.

The enclosed letter said:

"Heard you were a bit short of gasoline down there and here is a little to tide you over."

It is illegal to detach or transfer ration coupons.

FDR Still Confined To Bed; Condition Reported Improved

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 (P)—On his physician's advice, President Roosevelt remained in his White House quarters again today trying to shake off an intestinal upset.

"I am glad to be able to tell you," said William D. Hassett, assistant presidential secretary, "that the president is somewhat better. He still has a little temperature, but less than a degree, still, and Dr. (Ross T.) McIntire thinks it's advisable for him to remain in the White House today and tomorrow, at least. So there will be no engagements either day."

Hassett said he thought the president was not even doing any business over the telephone, because what Mr. Roosevelt needs is rest and relaxation.

WALLACE DIES THIS MORNING FOR SLAYING

SALEM, Ore., Feb. 26 (P)—William E. Wallace, 54, an agent for a Portland gambling house, paid with his life at 8:35 a. m. today for fatally shooting Benjamin Finkell, Portland salesman, August 8, 1941.

Wallace entered the lethal gas chamber in the state penitentiary at 8:30 a. m. The fumes reached his face about 8:35 and he apparently lost consciousness instantly.

No Breakfast

Wallace was convicted in Multnomah county. The shooting took place on a downtown Portland street after Finkell, who was seated in a car with his fiancée, Patricia Martin, Portland, protested Wallace's use of profanity. Wallace, angered, fired the fatal shot as Finkell prepared to get out of the car.

Wallace clung to a hope for executive clemency until midnight. He ate no breakfast and would make no comment this morning. At the last minute he halted preparations for his execution by demanding that Warden George Alexander read the death warrant in full.

Note Revealed

This Alexander did, taking about 5 minutes. Thereafter, Wallace walked calmly into the execution room and was strapped in the lethal cell.

The doomed man disclosed shortly before his execution a note he received from Portland signed "Peggy and Joe" and reading—"Christ said 'Fear not for I will help you.'" Wallace said he knew no Peggy and Joe and had no idea where the message originated.

No one claimed the body after the execution.

Wallace lost an appeal to the state supreme court by a 4-3 decision. Former Governor Charles A. Sprague denied clemency.

Nationwide Milk Rationing Seen By Next Fall

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 26 (P)—Charles W. Holman of Washington, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Federation, predicts nationwide milk rationing by next fall unless the OPA changes price ceilings, which he said were leading to the wholesale slaughter of dairy cattle.

Holman spoke last night at the tenth annual convention of Midwest Producers' Creameries, Inc., which was attended by nearly 200 delegates from Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Tennessee.

B, C GAS RENEWAL APPLICATIONS DUE

Only those motorists whose B and C rations are about to expire should apply now for renewals, the district OPA explained today in answer to inquiries from many persons in doubt as to when to apply.

B books were issued at staggering periods, the OPA pointed out, and drivers are therefore asked to check the expiration date on their own ration books. They may apply for renewals of any type of book within 30 days of the expiration date but are asked by the OPA not to apply at once unless their rations expire in the near future.

This will give the nation boards time to handle renewals which are immediate, said the OPA.

As A books are good until July 21, they do not come up for renewals at this time, it was emphasized.
