

WINE BILL WINS FIRST ROUND IN OREGON HOUSE

SALEM, March 2 (AP)—Supporters of Sen. W. E. Burke's bill to give liquor stores a monopoly of the sale of wines containing more than 14 per cent alcohol by volume had won their first round in the house today, but only by the margin of a single vote.

The final showdown will come tomorrow morning, when the bill will be up for final passage.

More Profits
The house voted 31 to 28 late yesterday in favor of an alcoholic control committee minority report recommending passage of the bill. And 31 votes is the minimum necessary to pass a bill.

Rep. H. R. Jones, Salem, said putting the wines in liquor stores would give the stores more profits and thus increase old age pension revenues. Rep. Joseph E. Harvey, Portland, said the fortified wines are a menace to young people and cause insanity.

Pier Objects
Rep. Stanhope S. Pier, Portland, said the bill would force hundreds of wine, grocery and drug stores out of business.

"This bill would not accomplish its purpose," Pier said, "because these wines would be just as accessible in liquor stores as they are now. If this fortified wine is half as bad as they say it is, it should be prohibited."

The greatest development of the next 50 years will be the march of our civilization through the Pacific area. After the war there will be a substantial migration of Americans to Pacific islands. Many of the boys who fought there will want to make their homes there, just as many soldiers stayed on in the Philippines after the Spanish war. — Rep. Warren Magnuson of Washington.

Writer Missing

(NEA Telephoto)
Latest casualty among U. S. war correspondents is Robert Post, above, New York Times writer, reported missing after the big American air raid on German city of Wilhelmshaven. Casualties among war front newsmen have been three to four times greater proportionately than battle casualties of the army. Press casualty list to date is: ten dead, 26 hurt or wounded and 27 missing.

OREGON HOUSE DEFEATS CIVIL SERVICE BILL

SALEM, March 2 (AP)—The house defeated 34 to 24 yesterday a bill to establish a civil service system for Oregon's 7000 state employees, opponents charging the measure would freeze present employees on their jobs and thus make it impossible for returning soldiers to get state jobs after the war.

Rep. Robert A. Bennett, Portland, leading the battle in behalf of the measure, said the bill would "provide efficiency and economy for the state, justice for the workers, and produce the highest type of public servant for elective officers because they wouldn't have to think about giving out jobs to political office-seekers."

Marsh Opposed
Bennett said the bill would come in handy if "Oregon elects a Huey Long who wanted to fire the employees."

Rep. Eugene E. Marsh, McMinnville, opposed the bill because "there is no evidence of a spoils system in Oregon, and the bill would freeze incompetents on their jobs. It would cost $75,000 to set up the system, and it is unfair to the boys in the armed forces."

Rep. John Hall, Portland, said the bill provides for a director who would be given "despotic, autocratic and tyrannic powers."
