Today's Roundup

DOG owners, having induced the council to refrain from drastic restrictions on their pets, now face the responsibility of making the liberalized program work.

EPLEY

A few offending dogs can upset the whole plan. For it is true that dogs running at large in the city can do a great deal of damage to gardens, and gardens are mighty important this year.

The council would be justified in a moderate control program in the plant growing period. It remains to be seen whether dog owners will establish a voluntary control that will make council action unnecessary.

In the current situation, it is dog owners who are vociferous, but there is sentiment on the other side, and it will probably show itself later if the dog situation gets out of hand.

The number of people who participated in this lively ruckus far exceeded the number who ordinarily interest themselves in governmental affairs hereabouts. There are many important matters that come along through the year-budget hearings, for example-that deserve some such showing of public interest, but never get it.

How About It?

D<sup>OG</sup> owners, as well as anyone else, are perfectly justified in making their opinions known to the council. The turnout was impressive, and inasmuch as it occurred on Monday night, we are going to suggest a similar turnout next Monday night at the surgical dressing project in the Red Cross headquarters, where work of vital importance to the war effort is Monday nights are men's nights in the surgical dressing room. Last night, the showing was pretty bad, except for state guardsmen who came en masse to help out. Volunteers were reduced to a pitiful few.

People have time to go to dog hearings. They have time to go to shows and to lodge meet-ings. They have time to play cards. How about giving an evening or an afternoon a week to the Red Cross surgical dressing project? Surely, it is vitally important that the medical services on the field of battle be provided with the supplies they need to care for our wounded. Communities like Klamath Falls must help out if these supplies are to be sufficient, and the opportunity lies in the surgical dressing project. Both men and women can do this job.

Let this be a town that can do more than get a full house at a dog hearing. Let this be a town that can turn out its quota of surgical dressings for our wounded men. How about it?

Klamath's Pelican basketeers are going to another state tournament at Salem this week. This time, because of a wartime shifting of the districts, Klamath was forced to meet stiff opposition to get to Salem, but still it won out in the preliminaries. Here's a hand for the lads as they go into a tough state meet.

The Japs have been required to commit themselves to reinforcements of men, planes and ammunition to sustain their vast conquests of the South Pacific, thereby diminishing their power and possibilities in front of Chiang Kai-Shek. The sinking of their convoy means they will have to send even more.

This not only takes away from China the fighting power necessary for the Japs to knock China out, but also the indispensable ships (upon which latter item they are exceptionally As long as the bulk of Jap military strength is pledged to Manchuria and the South Seas, Chiang need have no grave fears.

Russian Front

A SATISFACTORY assessment of the war on the Russian front is harder to make. In the war of movement in progress there, static lines mean little and the question is how much of the German army has been destroyed and how much power the Russians have left.

This is of especial importance to us in view of the imminence of our promised invasion of the continent this year, because it may largely determine what we will have to face.

Some authorities claim the heavy fighting in Russia has been at only a few strong points, such as Stalingrad, the Donets basin, and the Caucasus. Except at Stalingrad, they say Hitler has called heavily on the forces of the conquered nations, particularly Rumania and Italy, while saving his own men.

The best evidence indicates, however, that Hitler has not been able to get sufficient men from the satellites to force the war off on them. He got about 12 divisions from Italy (now withdrawn, but no doubt replaced at least in part), nine from Hungary, one from Spain, and possibly 15 from Rumania.

Certainly, he tapped Rumania harder than anyone else, and some estimates of Rumanian troops on the front run as high as 30 divisions.

But the best information is that no more than 40 divisions of satellites' troops could be made to fight in Russia for Hitler-a paltry 600,000.

The number of German divisions on the front has best been reported at 180-2,700,000 troops.

Certainly then, the best of the German eastern army has been in Russian fighting and has not been saved out. Certainly also, German production is declining and the manpower squeeze is so great that he has been forced to take men out of the army and put them back in the factories, in some instances.

How he can organize a spring offensive comparable in any way to that of last year is beyond comprehension of any outside authority

True, his losses have not amounted to anything like the fantastic Russian claims (else his entire army would now be twice annihilated), but where he is going to get the men, planes and equipment to try to rush back to Stalingrad is hard to imagine,

The general expectation is that he will retire to a shorter eastern line which can be defended by strongly holding a few points against the Russians, and then switch his endeavors mainly to meet our expected blows - by a march through Spain, an attack on Turkey or a purely defensive internal consolidation.
