Three Men Drift 83 Days On Life Raft in Atlantic

MIAMI, Fla., March 12 (AP)—A young seaman, one of three men who drifted 83 days on a life raft after their ship was torpedoed in the South Atlantic, arrived here safely to tell of the epic struggle against the sea.

Basil D. Izzi, navy gunner, of South Barre, Mass., related the story, describing how their daily prayers were answered by showers of rain, and by birds and fish which came close enough to be caught for food.

"I know God was with me all the way," Izzi declared. He and his companions, two Dutch merchant seamen, survived the longest journey on a life raft recorded since the war began.

Two others, Ensign James Maddox, of LaFayette, Ind., and George Beasley, both of the U. S. navy, died during the trip and were given sea burial.

The ship, a United Nations freighter, was torpedoed November 24. Izzi, member of the gun crew of which Maddox was the commander, said he jumped overboard when the vessel sank. He clung to wreckage for two days, then was found by those on the life raft and pulled aboard.

On January 24, they sighted an airplane. The following day they saw a convoy and signalled an escort vessel which took them aboard.

The navy has kept no official records of the number of days survivors have drifted on life rafts during the war, although officers expressed belief the 83 days of Izzi and his companions was a record.

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., March 12 (AP)—John M. Holmes, 37, once a member of San Francisco peninsula society, may leave San Quentin prison on parole March 23, after serving one year and eight months of a 10-year sentence for manslaughter.

Holmes shot and killed William Davis McNary, 26, of Portland, Ore., May 3, 1941. An argument over attention to a woman preceded the shooting, in a San Mateo hotel. Holmes attempted to end his own life, and was permanently blinded by a bullet.

Crowded Housing Brings Increased Fire Fatalities

PORTLAND, March 12 (AP)—Overcrowded housing conditions brought about by Portland's emergence as a war industrial center and carelessness were blamed by coroner's officials today for an unprecedented rate of fire fatalities.

Seven persons perished in fires so far this year compared with 15 during all of last year. Six died in fires in 1941 and 11 in 1940, coroner's records showed.

Many home fires, the office said, are caused by tired war workers dozing off and failing to watch stoves or dropping asleep while smoking.
