SUE AND ROBERT

THE BOSWORTHS

ROGER AND ROBERT

PETER AND SALLY

THE UNITED STATES ARMY and navy is well represented on this page because papas of these young people are serving in the armed forces. It's up to them, the small fry, to plant the Victory gardens this spring, to mow the lawn, feed Rover and the cat, and, in general, to keep the home fires burning so Dad can toast his toes when he comes home.

Sue, five and a half, holds Robert Jr., as he observes the antics of the camera for the first time. They are children of Lt. and Mrs. Robert A. Thompson, and are at home with mother at 531 Pacific Terrace while Pop is with the army in Washington, D. C. (Left, top).

ROGER, 11, AND ROBERT, 9, write to father who is Vernon Kuykendall, radio technician, second class, United States navy, San Francisco. Mrs. Kuykendall and her sons are remaining here at 335 Alameda street, until the unpleasantness is over. (Left, above).

Plump smiles from Peter, four next June, and Sally, 10, go to Lieutenant Howard Barnhisel, who now serves with the army at the Port of Embarkation, Seattle. Mrs. Barnhisel, Pete and Sal', are at home on Conger avenue. (Right, above).

A jaunty angle of his sailor hat doesn't keep Frederick, five, from being a bit homesick for Daddy, Lt. (sg) Albert O. Roenicke, who is up at Camp Farragut, Idaho, with the navy. Frederick is here with his two young charming sisters, Ruth Alberta, six, and Virginia Lois, almost four. Mrs. Roenicke and the children are at home on Portland street.
