Familiar Faces Seen in Oregon

Stay Home to Shop and for Second Cup of Coffee, Says Small Town Enthusiast

The nicest thing about the state of Oregon, for those who have lived here any length of time, is glimpses of familiar faces no matter where you journey between the Washington and California borders.

Last week in Salem, lunching at the Spa with Arthur Bremer, former desk man on The Herald and News and now with the United Press up north, and Marguerite Reider, who does things up to a turn for the women readers of the Capital Journal, caught a glimpse of a familiar red and white sweater worn with white sweater worn with dash and aplomb by no other than Dr. George I. Wright, this town's No. 1 fan. Of course, up to see the Pelicans wallop the Baker hoopsters. A nice talk, too, with Berkeley DeVaul who is with the state tax commission in Salem, and he still likes Klam-ath Falls.

ath Falls.

Buzzing through Portland's Own Store with Margaret Steiger on Monday, caught an out-of-the corner view of one of our shopping matrons who was bent on catching those chuck-a-block elevators while her young son yipped to try the escalator. Mamma

Saw the Samuel P. Millers who have an elegant flower-ing peach tree in spring glory in their nice back yard and also visited by telephone with two former Klamath families now Porlanders, the George Clarks and the How-ard Metcalfs. Friends of Mrs. Metcalf's mother, Mrs. James Perry, will be interested to know that she is living in Portland right now. Mrs. Norval Jones, a former Klamathite, is living in Salem and we saw her while window shopping. Speaking of shopping, pur-chases included two jars of hand cream which could easily be had in our town! Smarties will buy here and save their energy for something besides standing on their heads to get attention of clerks in war towns. Couldn't buy a second cup of coffee in Portland if you knew the cook's grandma. You can get a fairly well flattened nose dashing into a restaurant entrance and after a crash landing find the door is locked for the day. After the third try you become as cautious as a jungle prowling marine.

The camellias are out in the valley, but our daffodils are peeking through and this is a swell place to live!

PLANS MADE FOR CRAFTS DISPLAY.

Plans are being completed for the International Arts and Crafts show which will be sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Paul's church on Tuesday, April thirteenth, from one o'clock in the afternoon through the evening in the parish hall.

Those persons having exhibits from any of the foreign countries, escpecially from the Scandinavian countries, are asked to loan articles for the show. They may contact Mrs. Charles F. Scharfenstein. Mrs. Frederick W. Hamilwhich will be served in the Russian manner. Assisting her will be Mrs. Van Evans, Mrs. G. H. Upington, Mrs. E. J. Mrs. Roy Lee, Mrs. Livingston and Mrs. Franklin L. Weaver.

Soroptimist Club Hears Book Review

Mrs. Stearns Presents "Simon Bolivar" at Luncheon Meeting on Thursday

Soroptimists had an unusual treat Thursday when Mrs. Ralph W. Stearns, the guest speaker, reviewed Thomas Rourke's book, "Simon Bolivar."

Mrs. Stearns drew a very interesting picture of the back-ground of the famous Liberator of northern South America, and of the Venezuelan people, whose regard for the great leader amounts almost to reverence. Bolivar is considered the "George Washington of South America." In some of the vari-ous essays that he wrote on government, he predicted the forming of a great Pan Ameri-
