

MERCY FLIER BEGINS HUNT OF AIR CRASH

CHALLIS, Idaho, April 3. (AP) Mercy flier Penn Stohr today begins his second hunt in less than two months for army air-men ground in central Idaho's primitive wilderness.

In mid-February Stohr, veteran Cascade, Idaho, pilot, put his ski-equipped plane down on frozen Loon lake to rescue five men marooned when their army plane crash-landed.

Tuesday night a four-motored bomber, believed based at Walla Walla, Wash., crashed into a mountainside near here. Ground crews reported there were no bodies in the burned wreckage and it was believed the crewmen parachuted before their plane crashed.

Scene of this manhunt is 125 miles east of that which centered at Loon lake.

Lt. Thomas K. Perry, public relations officer at the Walla Walla field, said it was almost certain that the plane which crashed here was the one missing from his base.

Red Cross Notes

RED CROSS "UNKNITTING"
By ROSE POOLE

Probably the oddest war relief organization in America is the Unknitters' club—a group of women who meet weekly in New York City to unravel sweaters and socks that other well-meaning women throughout the country have knitted for Uncle Sam's sailors and soldiers.

Their biggest task is unknitting turtle-neck sweaters that well-meaning ladies make apparently under the impression that such garments are the prevailing doughty style. These women also unknit socks because many of these hand-made hose would fit an elephant.

The Unknitters' club works in close cooperation with the various war organizations, who send the members their "impossible" contributions. After unknitting an outfit the women send back the yarn.

The club was founded by 10 women who wanted to aid the war effort, but were unable to knit, so they hit upon the unknitting idea.

However, your Klamath county chapter of the American Red Cross has never yet been a candidate for the Unknitters' club. Over 1000 garments have been knitted by the Klamath county chapter and not one has ever been returned, and this surely speaks well for the quality of the work done here. If a garment does not pass inspection by the army quartermaster's staff it is returned to the Red Cross chapter who's label it bears, and, as stated above, none have ever been returned here.

Our last quota of knitted garments for the army has been completed. Mrs. Louise Albertson, head of the knitting department, wishes to extend her thanks and sincere appreciation of the very fine work done by all those who have worked on this program.

The next quota will be knitted for the navy and the yarn will be ready for distribution in a week's time.

Red, white, and blue are the world's favorite colors for flags. South Dakota has an Indian population of 26,500 who live on nine reservations.

The Ruins of Essen

These blocks of burnt-out buildings, part of 140 devastated areas in Essen, are vivid evidence of the destruction wrought by RAF bombers in recent heavy raids on the German industrial city. Famous Krupp munitions works was partly destroyed here.

First Lady Tells Women Of Duty in "Better World"

SEATTLE, April 3. (AP)—To the women of today will fall the task of carrying the next generation on into a better world, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told an audience of more than 2000 here last night.

Speaking at a meeting sponsored by the Women's War Savings league of Washington, she added:

"There is so much for the women of this country to do. Go on working."

"The women of the nation must use their strength to make this war a total war. The women of the United States must give the best they have to give."

"The first lady urged complete cooperation among women's groups and the stamping out of all petty or jurisdictional jealousies."

She explained England's flexible program, the women's volunteer services, which is organized under government supervision.

"Whatever is needed to be done anywhere—they organize and do it," she said. "If one organization feels it is in a position to take over a service being done by another, the latter gives it up and does something else."

"There is no feeling at any time of wanting to hold on to a job or an organization. There is so much to do there is always something for everybody."

Camp White Campaigns for "Glamour for Service Men"

CAMP WHITE, April 3. (AP)—Declaring themselves dissatisfied with girls in slacks, work suits and factory clothes, Camp White soldiers today enlisted the aid of Dolores Moran, Hollywood starlet, in a "Glamour for Servicemen" campaign.

The first lady urged complete cooperation among women's groups and the stamping out of all petty or jurisdictional jealousies.

"Are we men or machines?" they said. "We look at enough straight lines all day. We want to see curves at night. On our preferred list are sweaters, shorts, evening gowns, bathing suits and clinging clothes. We ask you as a representative glamour girl to lead our campaign to remind girls to look their prettiest and dress glamorously for servicemen. Don't let us down, Dolores. Keep our spirits flying."

HIGH SCHOOL News Notes and Comment

An assembly was held Wednesday afternoon to award letters and numerals to gridsters and hoopsters. George Proctor introduced Joseph Peak, city director of physical education, who presented the three coaches of boys' sports, Paul Deller, coach of freshman football and basketball; Frank Ramsey, coach of Wildcat football and basketball; and Wayne Scott, coach of Wildcat football and of state champs in basketball.

We might mention here that there is the possibility of a great duel arising. Mr. Woodhouse now has a contender for his role of making corny cracks—namely, Frank Ramsey. It seems one can get the latest published joke (J) books. May the best man win. Maybe we'll let Joe Peak be umpire.

It was announced in the Friday morning bulletin that those students who bring their lunches should eat at certain tables. It has been noticed that there has been quite a bit of disturbance during the lunch hour in the cafeteria, which caused the rule to be made. Students are asked to help out in this venture.

The annual junior amateur show will be Friday, April 9. Admission price will be 15 cents and will be presented in the morning. The time has not been decided.

There will be plays in the Little Theatre April 8, 14, 16, 27 and 28. Each of these days a performance will be given during the lunch hour.

The bond drive at the high school has slowed down somewhat the last two days. The four girls chosen to run in the final contest, Bettie Hopkins, Betty McKinney, Vivian Dirschl and Sally Mueller, were all good choices.
