The Garden Grows! What to Do Next?

Freezing, Storing, Drying and Canning Vegetables Next Step in the Harvest

By MARGARET P. LAMB Theoretically all our gardens are planted and growing so now it is time to begin to think what is to be done with all the produce. There are three ways of preserving it for winter use. One, the old time method of canning. Much of this will be done this year, probably more than ever before, but there is always some risk in this method and some chance of loss. Freezing is an ideal method, but unless one already has a locker this is not to be considered for lockers are not to be had at any price. On the other hand, drying of vegetables is satisfactory and absolutely safe. Not all dried products look and taste differently when dried. Beets for example when prepared after dry-ing gain back almost all of their volume and a great deal of their crispness and flavor. They do lose some of their vitamin content. The question has been asked many times, "When can vegetables be dried?" They should be dried when fresh from the garden the same as when they would be prepared for freezing or canning. As for freezing, vegetables should be blanched. The vegetables should be sliced or shredded and then dipped in boiling water.

water. All vegetables should be blanched thoroughly. More specific directions can be had from bulletins put out for that purpose or by asking our home Gemonstration agent. After blanching the vegeta-bles are drained and th en spread on the drying trays and drying started immediateand drying started immediate-The temperature should ly. not be over 150 degrees and the contents of the trays should be kept moving all the time to insure even dry-ing. It is well to shift the trays in the dryer too. The drying process must be continuous, it cannot successful-ly be stopped in the middle. It is simple to tell when the vegetables are dry enough, they are brittle and snap. If the vegetables are not thor-oughly dry they will mold and be lost. If they are not properly blanched the flavor will be affected. Keen the will be affected. Keep the finished product in jars with tight tops or insects will move in, they love dried vegetables and fruits. If properly stored dried vegetables and fruits will keep indefinitely. Vegetable dryers are being manufactured and will be ready for use by the time the crops are ready for the dry-charts and plans for the making of home dryers will be carried in many papers and have already been carried in several magazines.

There have been many questions asked about pruning tomatoes. There is a new eight page bulletin to be released shortly from OSC that will tell all about laterals, what to remove and how to train those left. For anyone who needs to conserve space this will be of value.

When we, with our enormous expanses of unused land, wonder how we are go-ing to produce enough food come through this war without going hungry, it is interesting to note what Eng-land has done in the last four years. Last year in the fall they had six hundred V-garden shows. This in spite of the bombings they had en-dured. Vegetables enough have been raised so they have

State PTA Meet Slated

Election of County Officers Set for Monday Afternoon

At three o'clock Monday afternoon in the Fremont school auditorium, the Klamath County Council of Par-ents and Teachers will meet to discuss the state convention scheduled for April the fourteenth and fifteenth in Portland, Mrs. J. R. Hall, presi-dent, will be among those at-tending. Also scheduled to at-tend will be the incoming president, to be named at Mon day's meeting.

It is hoped that the various local groups in the county will send at least one delegate to the state meeting which will probably be small, but most important in this war year.

Says Freda G. Mowrey, Oregonian's club editor: The trials and tribulations of planning a convention in wartime are becoming firsthand experiences these days to Mrs. Frank W, Blum, the president of the Oregon Con-gress of Parents and Teachers and the hardworking congress committees in charge of arrangements for its 1943 meeting, which will be held in Portland in mid-April.

In the first place, she says, Portland had to be the only choice for the convention this year because, with transportation problems what they are and even as hard as it is to get to Portland, getting several hundred delegates to any other point in the state would probably be much more difficult. When it came to housing those delegates, the PTA com mittee found that hotels are not anxious these days to make reservations for conven-tion crowds so that it has been necessary to ask Portland's parent-teacher people to register extra rooms they have in their homes which will be available to delegates.

Because restaurants, wor-ried over food and help, are not available for large meet-ings, delegates will scatter for luncheons during the conven-tion instead of gathering at one place. A banquet is being planned for one night, but it will be very informal and streamlined. The convention, definitely streamlined to meet wartime demands, will be held April 14 and 15, with a board meeting the night of April 13. A post-convention board session will be held the night of April 15. Mrs. Blum will complete, at this year's meeting, a two-year term as state president. Officers for the next two years will be elected at the April fifteenth business meet-

ALL-DAY MEET HELD DURING THURSDAY

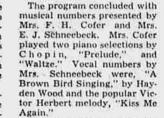

Members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the First Methodist church met for an all-day session Thursday, March the twenty-fifth, in the church parlors.

The morning hours were devoted to the study class under the direction of Mrs. Paul Edwards, study leader, who led the group in a discus-sion of "The Churches and a Just and Durable Peace." Mrs. Just and Durable Peace." Mrs. Edwards stressed the import-ance of the topic, and an-nounced that at the next meet-ing of the class on April the twenty-second, the lesson would deal with peace problems within our own United States.

At noon a paper sack lun-cheon was enjoyed, after which members of the execu-tive board met together to discuss plans for the coming months.

The afternoon session open-ed at two o'clock, with Mrs. Victor Phillips in charge of the devotional period. A gen-eral business meeting followed with Mrs. L. K. Phelps, presi-dent of the society presiding dent of the society, presiding. Mrs. John Yaden, correspond-ing secretary for the Cascade district, reported on the state conference held recently in Portland. Mrs. Will Wood, assisted by Mrs. L: A. Brannan and Mrs. O. R. Kluth, presented an interesting study on "Uprooted Peoples," commonly termed migrants. Enlightening facts were given concerning the progress which has been made by committees of churchwomen in relieving undesirable conditions existing in migrant camps over the entire nation.

Following the program, tea was served by ladies of Circle two, the tea table being at-tractive with a lace cloth cen-been able to subsist through these last four years. The RAF is planting three thousand acres of vegetables this year. The plantings are near the air bases and the personnel will do all the necessary work. This will make this part of the armed forces self-sustaining as far as vege-tables are concerned this year, as well as giving them relax ing work to do while wait-ing for more active duty.

As those of us well know, who have tried to buy fertilizer with nitrogen in it this spring, nitrogen is very scarce, and in the next years to fol-low it will probably be more scarce than it is now. The nitrogen supply can be sured by sowing vetch in the home garden and by turning it under next spring. The question arises immediately, how can vetch be sowed when there are still late vegetables in the ground. This has been done very successfully by a Portland gardener who sows the vetch between the rows and not only uses it for nitro gen for next year's crop but for a shoe-protecting patch. The late garden may be muddy and the vetch grows very thick and not very high, so it makes a fine place to walk when pulling late vegetables. The auxiliary and chevaliers of Canton Crater will hold their April meeting next Thursday evening, the eighth, at the IOOF hall, when a polluck dinner will be served at half past six o'clock, and a large turnout of the mcmbership is urged.
