

FEWER POINTS FOR SAUSAGES NOW REQUIRED

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP)—Lower point values for sausage products and some pork cuts went into effect today.

Attributing its action to slow sales and a resultant danger of spoilage, the office of price administration announced point reductions ranging from 14 to 50 per cent on such products as wieners, scrapple, chitterlings and pork neck and backbones. Dry and semi-dry sausages such as hard salami, churinger and mortadella are unchanged.

Pork sausage, wieners, bologna, baked loaves and liver sausage were cut from seven to six points a pound when no non-meat filler is added. Products containing non-meat filler, such as cereals, were reduced from seven to five points a pound.

Neck and backbones were cut from two to one point a pound and chitterlings from four to two.

Japs Building Air Bases in Aleutians Despite US Bombs

By EUGENE BURNS

A FAR WESTERN BASE IN THE ANDREANOF ISLANDS, April 3 (AP) (Delayed)—In the face of heavy bombings and United States air and sea action against their fog-shrouded supply lines, the Japanese are building air fields on Kiska and Attu islands.

The eleventh bomber command headquarters revealed today that steady progress on a more than half mile runway on inhospitable, oft-bombed Kiska might make it ready for fighter planes before Easter. It already has been bombed a half dozen times. Lightning fighters have strafed it repeatedly. Its completion would mean speedy Zero fighters might soon be rising to challenge American bombers above the Aleutian chain.

The long bomber field under construction at Attu, westernmost of the Aleutian islands, has been bombed twice. Ten Liberators unloaded a total of 20 tons of explosives.

A photograph from the air first showed March 11 that the Attu field outline was nearing completion. Several hundred fox holes already ring it. There are many clusters of buildings in the valley. Indications are that the Japanese either have, or expect to have, a large number of men on the rocky isle, which is only 735 miles from the northernmost Japanese island base, Paramushiro.

Completion of Attu and Kiska fields would provide the enemy with a string of stepping stones from Tokyo, which even fighter planes could span. Kiska and Attu are 195 miles apart.

Attu is the island which the Japanese once almost completely evacuated after their original occupation. Reconnaissance showed reinforcements there again last in 1942, after the strength previously had been shifted to Kiska to offset the new American base in the Andreanofs.

The ant-like industry of the enemy opens a wide field of conjecture as to Japanese intentions. They may be getting set to repel a naval bombardment with Zeros, to repel any beach landing attempts, to harass our advance bases if possible, to hit our shipping lines or to launch an offensive against Alaska, in a repetition of apparent plans which went awry at the time of the Dutch Harbor bombing last June 4.

Outfitting and supplying the fields poses a major problem for the Japanese, but the enveloping fog of the Aleutians is an aid in the effort. What airmen refer to as "stinking weather," all too frequent in the Aleutians, is an aid to plans of running the gantlet with ships.

The last reported Japanese effort was March 26, when two or three cargo ships approached the Aleutians under heavy cruiser and destroyer escort. A U. S. navy task force of half the enemy strength sent that Japanese convoy, which apparently carried vitally needed supplies, scurrying westward.

(An earlier delayed dispatch, Burns related how he flew with a force of 21 medium and heavy bombers out beyond Attu, seeking the Japanese sea force only four hours after the long range naval engagement had been broken off. Parka-clad airmen flew over both Kiska and Attu under poor visibility conditions, carrying bombs with the snow and ice still clinging to them. But they never were able to sight the enemy ships; had to turn back because of dwindling gasoline and approaching twilight; were unable to drop their bombs at Kiska because of fog; arrived back at their base shortly before snow began to fall.

To date, 15 Japanese ships have been listed as destroyed by navy guns, torpedoes and bombers in the Aleutians theater.

The Kiska runway is being built by out-and-fill tactics along a ridge. Bulldozers, 50 light trucks, hand-propelled trucks and narrow-gauge rails are believed to be in use in the all-out effort. Four heavy anti-aircraft batteries have been throwing heavy fire at our aircraft and another appeared under construction today.

SUB CHASER BOND SALES ON UPGRADE

Union labor's Sub-chaser bond sales campaign has now passed the $250,000 mark on its way to the $500,000 goal, it was announced Monday. The goal must be reached by May 1.

Labor committeemen said they were sorry to announce that a prize fight program, planned as a part of the campaign, has been called off because Camp Adair was unable to provide fighters for the bouts. It had been planned to stage several bouts between Camp White and Camp Adair men, with a bond purchase the price of admission.

Five Liberator bombers recently made a long-distance raid on the largest coal mine in China. This mine supplies 75 per cent of Japan's coal and it is believed that this raid probably put it out of commission for a year.

Ambulance Corps Uniform Has Note of Distinction

There is a definite distinction to a uniform, such as that of the Oregon Women's Ambulance Corps, where it is a symbol of service, of trained hands and minds, of dignified and self-sacrificing service.

The Klamath platoon of the OWAC is asking for new recruits who are qualified to wear this uniform, in order to enlarge the group here that is training for emergency service in motor operation, ambulance driving, first aid, communications and fire fighting.

As a convenience to women interested in membership in the ambulance corps, the office at the armory will be open each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7 until 8 o'clock, or information may be obtained by calling 4350.

As in many branches of the armed service, the ambulance corps has two specified uniforms—one of khaki twill pants and short for field service, and a blue military suit and cap for dress occasions, which, thus far, has not been generally acquired by the Klamath platoon. The uniforms are worn upon official occasions, to all classes and upon public occasions when the company participates in community or patriotic affairs.

There's always a bright side; 50,000 pounds of coffee were destroyed in a Columbus, O., fire. Think of the cream that saves.

SPEAKING FOR YOUR STANDARD SERVICE MEN AND WOMEN

More greasing—less gassing!

You may never have realized that regular greasing, plus transmission and differential lubrication, can improve your gas mileage as well as protect your car. Much of the gasoline you use is only to overcome friction inside your car. Proper and frequent lubrication can keep that friction down to a minimum. Manufacturers' specifications for most cars call for greasing at each 1000-mile period. And you know we are experts at lubrication.
