PIONEER DAIRY BECOMES NEW WAR CASUALTY

Klamath county's pioneer dairy operated by Mrs. Clara Collman of the Old Fort road, became a war casualty this week when Mrs. Collman announced that she had gone out of business.

The Collman dairy dates back to 1918, when deliveries were made in the old horse and buggy manner. At various dairy shows in Portland, Mrs. Collman took first prizes and honorable mentions in the quality of milk from the Collman herd. Several months ago, when help went to war, Mrs. Collman sought assistance from the Klamath Creamery which took over delivery for her.

Cows from the Collman herd have been sold off in small lots, it was learned. Many of Mrs. Collman's original customers have remained with her for 25 years. There was always a waiting list in the little dairy's office.

No Bananas?

Yes, we have bananas today—maybe not in the U. S., but there are plenty in the South Seas. This U. S. soldier winding up a brief respite from war on a South Pacific Isle leaves loaded down with farewell gifts from natives.

Colorado Youth Kills Two Children

(NEA Telephoto) Two children, Donald Mattas, 8, and Milo Pfandt, 11, were killed when they were pushed over 175-foot Castle Rock, in Colorado, by 16-year-old William Eugene Wymer. Young Wymer, shown here with Sheriff Howard Vincent of Golden, Colo., said he charged the kids 10c to see the top of the cliff and then pushed them off but didn't know why he did it.
