ril 17 had "categorically denied to Germany the right to abuse the tragedy of Polish officers for her own perfidious schemes."
The statement said the government "unhesitatingly denounces nazi propaganda designed to create mistrust between the allies," and "all collaboration with the Germans has been scorned."

BERN, Switzerland, April 28
The International Red Cross held to its original position today that a request from all the countries concerned would be necessary for investigation of German charges that 10,000 Polish officers had been slain by the Russians near Smolensk.
The Russian-Polish diplomatic breach did not affect its decision, informed sources said.
German and Polish requests had been made for the naming of a neutral commission to investigate the alleged killings but under Red Cross rules all the parties concerned in an investigation must join the request.

ILLINOIS COAL MEN ATTEMPT NEGOTIATIONS

CHICAGO, April 28 (AP)—The Illinois coal operators association today requested the Illinois district of the United Mine Workers of America to meet the group immediately, independent of Appalachian negotiations under way in the east, to work out a new contract and keep the state's mines operating after the deadline Friday midnight.
George F. Campbell, president of the operators, telegraphed State President Ray Edmundson of the UMWA, now in New York City, that the Illinois operators were denied the right to participate in the Appalachian conferences in New York. Negotiations are now before the war labor board in Washington, with the miners refusing to participate.
Heretofore, Illinois operators and mine workers have awaited the outcome of the eastern negotiations before working out a separate contract.

Ickes Charges "No Understanding" of Gas-Rubber Problem

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson's January order to complete 55 per cent of the buna rubber program at the expense of high octane gasoline.
The committee is inquiring into a dispute involving Ickes, Undersecretary of War Patterson and Rubber Director Jeffers over priorities granted the rubber program.
Wallops Listed
Ickes listed these other "wallops" he said the aviation gasoline program had suffered:
"We did not receive any steel plate for new plants until March, 1942, and then it was delivered in a harum-scarum manner without regard to the needs or relative urgencies of the separate projects."
"While we persuaded the war production board to allocate the steel plate in May, 1942, and never had a bit of trouble with that thereafter, we were unable to persuade it to let us allocate the other materials, largely, I believe, because that would have been contrary to the then current theories of the board which revolved around priorities rather than scheduling."
"In the summer of 1942, the then authorities actually voted the aircraft production program and certain other military programs as of higher urgency than the program to produce fuel for combat planes."

No. 1 Ace Ready for More Action

Captain Joe Foss of the Marine Corps returned to United States (AP) after having downed 26, and possibly a half dozen more, Jap planes in the South Pacific. At his first press conference upon returning to the States, America's No. 1 ace of the war declared that he was ready to tackle the Germans if assigned to that job. Foss, right, describes a maneuver to Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Marine commandant.

unique said, but it was by dint of hardest fighting, especially in the Medjez-el-Bab sector where allied attacks were followed by enemy counter-attacks all day yesterday.

U. S. Cleans Arnum
The Americans under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., cleaned Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's northern Germans and Italians out of Djezel Dardys and occupied important high ground.

Another contingent, pushing toward Jefa station, 28 miles southwest of Bizerte, swept the enemy off Djezel el Azzag north of Jefa and also took Djezel el Ajed, just to the southwest of the station. These two knobs command much of the approach to Mateur, the important axis crossroads 16 miles to the east of Jefa.

Djezel Dardys taken by Americans in their northern thrust is about seven miles from the western shore of Lake Achkel, the westernmost of two lakes which stretch to Bizerte.
Barren-topped Djezel Ajred, nicknamed Bald Hill by the British, is one of the main defenses guarding the approaches to Mateur. Djezel Azzag flanks Green hill which with Bald hill formed a double-humped barrier across the Mateur road.

To the south, the British in the Medjerda valley were fighting within six miles of Tebourba, gateway to Tunis, and battling to take the last important high ground blocking their way to the Tunis plains.

No Trace Found of Indian Boy's Body

No trace of the body of Jesse Wright Jr., thought drowned April 18 in Williamson river, had been found Wednesday and officers stated that a wire net had been stretched across the river at the bridge below Pine Ridge dam.
The boy was wearing a cream colored shirt and overalls at the time of his disappearance. He was not wearing a hat or coat. Officers said, Jesse is described as weighing 127 pounds, 5 feet 4 inches tall. The youth is the son of Jesse Wright who lives at Spring creek, one mile above Pine Ridge.
endured more than a month in which all rubber projects were rated higher than all 100-octane plants.
"While in December, 1942, we finally attained the mandatory scheduling of parts for certain plants, the directive then issued had to be shared with the rubber program."
"We were denied a similar mandatory directive covering the plants scheduled to be finished in the second quarter of this year—and, in addition to failing to receive much help, we suffered a positive hindrance in that the rubber program did receive such a directive."
