

Plant Properly, Save Seed, Urge Experts

Prepared by the U. S. Department of Agriculture

The need for garden seed is greater this year than ever before, and for this reason it is important that all Victory gardeners buy and sow their seeds wisely.

"Don't buy more seed than you need to plant," cautions the U. S. department of agriculture. "Don't plant more seed than you need to get a stand."

The department points out that while the supply of vegetable seed for Victory gardens promises to be sufficient to meet the country's needs, the situation is tight, particularly for onion, beet and carrot seeds, and it would be unwise to waste any kind.

Nearly all gardeners, especially at first, have been found to sow seed too thickly. This not only requires an excess of seed, but also wastes labor, as the seedlings later must be thinned by hand to the spacing needed for proper growth. Where seed are sown too closely, poor growth and poor quality vegetables result unless thinning is properly done.

Bean and pea seeds should be spaced as the plants are to stand.

These vegetables never should be thinned in the rows.

Small seeds, such as carrots, collards, onions, parsnips, spinach, should be sown three or four times as thickly as the plants are to stand, because many seeds usually fail to produce good seedlings. Surplus seedlings are to be thinned out before the plants crowd one another.

Beet and chard "seeds" should be sown no thicker than the plants are to stand, because these "seeds" are really fruits, each

PLANTING CHART

The following table shows suitable spacing for a number of common vegetables in a small garden, with the amount of seed required for one foot and 100 feet of row and the proper depth of covering in a good sandy loam. In heavy soils seed should be covered less deeply and in light sandy soil a little more deeply.

containing several seeds. Some thinning is always necessary.

Cabbage, tomato, and onion plants and onion sets should be placed where they are to remain in the row.

Tall growing crops should be placed preferably on the north or west side of the garden so that they will not shade the low plants. As far as possible, the first plantings of small and early vegetables should be along the south or east side, with later crops to be sown progressively across the plot. This helps avoid confusion and damage to earlier sowings.

Gardeners should consult their experienced neighbors and local agricultural advisors on the best time to plant the various kinds of vegetables.
