

More Help Needed At Dressings Room

Women Must Meet Quota As Set by Surgical Projects Area Office for Klamath Falls

"Time On My Hands" is merely the name of a song, according to Klamath Falls women who, almost without exception are doing some kind of war work. But regardless of the few extra hours that are available in any busy woman's schedule, there is one project which needs to have more time given to it by both men and women alike, and that is the surgical dressings project under way in the Klamath county chapter, American Red Cross, rooms on Main street.

Quota for Klamath county is 70,000 dressings each month for the duration. Don't be surprised if this figure is upped. That is quite possible. Mrs. Ralph R. Macartney, who is surgical dressings project chairman, makes this explanation of the break-down in dressings figures:

For the women in the main work room, 34,000 dressings; for the men, 3000. From each auxiliary unit must come 4000 dressings per month. These units, now under way, are Mills, Altamont, Merrill, Tulelake and Gilchrist. These, of course, are in addition to the main workroom.

Mills and Altamont are over their quota. Merrill, Tulelake and Gilchrist, which have been in operation for the past two weeks, are making a creditable showing.

Last week at Tulelake, some thirty women showed up and all but two were from the country. These women are busy raising small livestock, raising their Victory gardens which put the small town plots to shame, and are feeding farm hands. At Altamont some women walk in four miles to the dressings center and are fortunate to get a ride back at night. Altamont is over its quota. Thirty-three were in attendance last week. Hours are from nine o'clock in the morning to ten o'clock at night, right straight through. Thursday is the day. At Mills the women are proud of their record and have a right to be. The work room is open Tuesday and Thursday from 12 noon to four o'clock.

Workrooms at the main project are open every day in the week with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, and on Tuesday and Thursday evenings the classes are largely attended by working women.

The men have set Monday night as their special night to gather. Some of the men are quite perturbed over the attendance which, it seems, has dwindled. These men are up to their ears in business problems which, right now, means war problems. But there are men who have less demanding work and they should be on hand with the rest of the boys in painter's caps, folding bandages for sons, brothers, nephews and the neighborhood kids who are on the fighting front.

Mrs. Macartney expects to visit the area office in San Francisco within a week or two. From the area office, according to word received by us, much praise goes out to the surgical dressings project rooms in our town. The dis-

OWAC Gives Navy Program

An invitation to members of all women's organizations of the city was issued through the president of each group to attend the all-navy program to be held next Friday evening, May the twenty-first, at eight o'clock at the armory under the sponsorship of the Klamath platoon of the Oregon Women's Ambulance corps.

pline and cooperation is excellent. Now all we need is to get more women out to reach the quota.

LEAVING KLAMATH

A wealth of memories after twenty-eight years of teaching in the Klamath Falls schools will go with Mrs. J. G. Swan, (Rachel Applegate), when she leaves this city to make her home in Junction City. The regrets of her many friends and former pupils were expressed this week when they learned of Mrs. Swan's plans to make her home in the valley.

Soroptimist Club Letters Enjoyed

Activities of Sister Groups Reviewed at Luncheon Gathering Thursday

The Thursday program for this week's Soroptimist meeting was a series of reports of members who had visited other Soroptimist clubs in various parts of the United States. A most interesting letter from Mrs. Robert Thompson was read. Mrs. Thompson is in Asheville, North Carolina, with Lt. Thompson and had the privilege of visiting the Washington, D. C. club last week. She met many outstanding women, among them Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Lady Halifax and Madam Ivy Litvinoff. Mrs. Thompson also visited with Mrs. Lowell Stockman.

Mrs. Effie Garcelon gave a brief talk on her visit to a meeting of the San Francisco Soroptimists in March, when the Honorable Margaret Bonfield, a member of the Greater London club, was the speaker. The Honorable Margaret Bonfield is the labor representative in Parliament and told most interestingly of how the women in England are cooperating in war work, of the way all service clubs get together on a project and how much more they are able to accomplish in that way. They have a slogan over there, "Make, Do and Mend," and it is remarkable how many things can be made usable by a little mending. She also stressed the "Bevridge Plan."

Mrs. Laura Bertram reported on her visit to the "Club for Wives of Enlisted Men," at 925 Powell street, San Francisco, which was organized and is maintained by the Soroptimist club of San Francisco as their major project. They are rendering a valuable service to the young wives of our men in the ranks by helping them to find apartments and positions in the city, and by helping take care of children while the mothers shop or visit with their husbands. The club is open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily, with some member in attendance at all times. Husbands are also welcome there, and there is a fully equipped kitchen where meals and luncheons are served at a very nominal sum.

Mrs. Sophie Kenoffel, who has just returned from San Diego, told of several visits to the San Diego Soroptimists whom she found very cordial and interested in what their sister clubs were doing in the Pacific northwest. One particularly interesting meeting was a joint meeting with all the service clubs of San Diego, at which the guest speaker was a recruiting officer for the Women Marines. Sophie said she thought she must have won many new recruits for she painted a very glamorous picture of this branch of service.

President Rose Poole and a group of Klamath Falls Soroptimists attended a Soroptimist meeting at Lakeview on Tuesday, and found our sister club in the eastern part of the state doing a very excellent work in entertaining convalescent

All graduate nurses are urged to attend a special meeting of district eight to be held at eight o'clock Tuesday evening, May the eighteenth, in the small club room at the city library.

Lt. Johanna Vreeland of the army nurse recruiting service will be the guest speaker of the evening. Inactive nurses are also asked to be present.

Mrs. Roy Lee and two children, Maryellen and Bobby, of Roseway drive are visiting for several weeks in Eugene with relatives of Mrs. Lee.
