Our Home Town

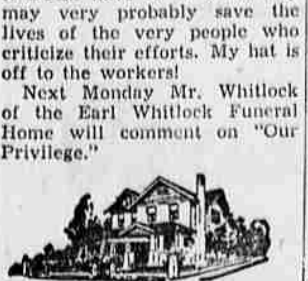

Civilian Defense Workers

By EARL WHITLOCK
It is quite the fashion, among certain types of fuzzy thinkers, to rather poke the finger of scorn at the loyal enthusiasm of our Civilian Defense Workers. Some folks say, "Oh, sure. They've got a chance to get in the lime-light, now. They're having a big time being important. Why, we're in no danger here. No enemy bomber could ever get at us. Not us!"

Yes? Well, maybe not. Maybe not. But, if you will recall, it was exactly that spirit of "They can't do this to us" that resulted in Pearl Harbor. And it cost us a great part of our navy and might well have cost us the war with Japan.

Please realize that no community on this sphere is more than sixty flying hours from any other point. There is ALWAYS some danger of attack here or anywhere else. And these Civilian Defense Workers are doing a fine and patriotic thing in devoting their time and their ability—for free—to learning how to do well a job that MAY never have to be done. But if it DOES have to be done, they may very probably save the lives of the very people who criticize their efforts. My hat is off to the workers!

Next Monday Mr. Whitlock of the Earl Whitlock Funeral Home will comment on "Our Privilege."

Oregonian Leads Surprise Attack-Bombing on Lae Japs

By MURLIN SPENCER
SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, May 15 (Delayed AP)—Pilots of A-20 Attack bombers, hard-flying youths who have seen more enemy positions from just above the tree tops than any other of General Douglas MacArthur's airmen, rejoiced in their jungle camps tonight.

They had realized an ambition of long standing. It had happened at Lae in northern New Guinea shortly after noon when the hard-hitting attack planes swooped in on the airfield, catching the Japanese completely by surprise. Their blazing machine-guns poured streams of bullets into 10 Zeros and twin-engine bombers.

Capt. Donald Good, Eugene, Ore., was flight leader. These fliers and others like them have been going in on Lae, Salamaua, Finshchagen, Madang, and—before the Papiuan campaign drove out the Nipponese—on Buna to find Japanese anti-aircraft fire waiting for them. If they strafed from 50 feet or 1000 feet they were under attack from the ground.

But today was different. "We caught the Nips by surprise," said Capt. Good. "We came on one truck and the surprised Japs fled into the woods. "When we hit the airframe been unserviceable. Good estimated at least three serviceable ships were knocked out. As for anti-aircraft fire, there wasn't a trace. Even the machine-gun positions were silent. This is the season when some men go fishing and others do their drinking at home. With war bonds you don't have to investigate before you invest.
