

FDA BEGINS EGG BUYING FOR MILITARY

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21 (AP)—The food distribution administration began egg purchases yesterday under an amended war food order designed to assure sufficient egg supplies for the armed forces, essential civilian needs and wartime requirements for dried whole eggs.

The order tightening reservation and non-storage provisions on shell eggs was necessitated by the movement of unusual quantities of shell eggs into storage for speculative purposes, the FDA said.

Current civilian needs and requirements for egg-breaking and drying have been reduced by this abnormal "into-storage" movement, it was said.

The order stated that no eggs may move into storage after May 20. Provisions also require that all shell eggs in cold storage on May 20 be reserved for government agencies and may be offered to them at no more than the ceiling prices.

Tulelake Boy Has Miraculous Escape On Bombing Raid

TULELAKE—Eldon Bates, Tulelake top turret gunner mentioned in a radio broadcast Wednesday evening as having a miraculous escape in a bombing raid over western Europe a few hours before, made his home for five years here with Mr. and Mrs. Gus Lindsey before enlisting a year ago in the army air corps.

Young Bates, who was credited on a previous raid over the continent with shooting down a German plane, escaped injury or death when a shell passed between him and the navigator, injuring the second man. Bates is listed officially as a first engineer on a B-17. He left the U. S. last November, flying from Maine to England.

Mrs. Lindsey received a Mother's Day cablegram from him early in May.

Destroyer Downes, Wounded at Pearl Harbor, Ready Again

VALLEJO, Calif., May 21 (AP) The destroyer Downes, mortally wounded at Pearl Harbor, has been reincarnated.

Into a sleek new body navy spairmen placed vital organs of the old ship that was shattered December 7, 1941.

Yesterday the new Downes was launched and she held not only the spirit of the old destroyer but 30 per cent of the old ship's complex machinery — her turbines, propeller shafts, and much operating equipment.

All this had been removed from the shattered hull at Pearl Harbor and shipped to Mare Island navy yard.

Moth-Proofing Solutions for Home Use Now Available

Moth-proofing solutions for use on wool clothing in the home are now generally available on the market and provide one more excellent weapon against the annual spring offensive of clothes moths, says Winifred K. Gillen, home demonstration agent.

Either dry cleaning or washing in a rich soapuds will kill moths in clothing but will not mothproof the garments against future attack. Hence, garments so treated either need to be stored away in clean, sealed boxes, bags, or trunks, or else rinsed in a mothproofing solution. The latter treatment is especially suitable for washable woollens such as blankets, sweaters, socks, and mittens, says Mrs. Gillen. When so treated, the articles are mothproofed until laundered again.

Mothproofing sprays are also on the market, but these protect only the fibers that are dampened, hence it is important that all the wool on the surface be covered, she says. As there are also sprays that kill moths but do not mothproof the fabric, it is important to read the label carefully before purchasing.

Sunning and brushing woolen clothing is practical if garments are carefully stored afterward. The moth larvae cannot stand bright sun and will drop to the ground from clothing left hanging in the sun on the line. The soft eggs are easily crushed or dislodged by thorough brushing, which is also necessary for folds which protect the larvae and eggs from the sun.

For storing clothes in airtight boxes, bags, chests or trunks the use of naphthalene flakes or paradichlorobenzene crystals at the rate of about one pound to a medium-sized trunk is still a standard practice, says Mrs. Gillen.

Moths do not eat cotton, linen, rayon or other fabrics of vegetable fiber, or silk. They will eat the woolen threads from mixtures, however.
