VIVIAN MARTIN GETS HIGH THESIS HONORS

MERRILL — Vivian Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martin, Merrill, who is graduating May 30 from the University of Oregon, was accorded high honors for her thesis, written for her B. S. degree in geology and accepted by Dr. John C. Merriam, head of the natural resources committee of the university, to be printed as a part of the committee's annual sectional reports and recommendations to congress.

Titled, "Recent Movements in Oregon Toward Conservation and Development of Natural Resources," it will be printed as a bulletin issued by the Oregon state department of geology and mineral industries and as an Oregon state department of higher education bulletin to be sent as exchange material to college and university libraries throughout the United States.

Miss Martin was selected as one of two geology students from the university recently to sit in at round table discussions of the Inter-American Institute which met in Eugene to confer on the role of improved relations and cooperation between the American countries in the western hemisphere. Discussion centered principally around the development of natural resources during the present war and also post-war relations.

Dr. Garcia Prada, Colombia, S. A., chief representative of the South American countries, was interested in Miss Martin's views on the subject, was her host at dinner while in the university town.

Following graduation she plans to return to Merrill for a month before resuming her studies.

Symbolic Victory "V" in War Plant

Echoing the valiant "V" chalked up under the very noses of Axis patrols, America's emblematic victory symbol is formed by these machines which angular drill and machine cylinder heads for Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines built by Chevrolet. Three major operations are performed by this battery of machines, whose output contributes to "Volume for Victory," the wartime production principle of Chevrolet.

Mountainous Attu

(U. S. Navy Photo From NEA) Beautiful but treacherous are the mountains of Attu where Americans are attacking Japs. Since sides of these volcanic peaks are too difficult to scale, our forces presumably advanced through passages between them. Enemy snipers hid in these hills to attack U. S. troops.

SAVED BY MIRAGE
A mirage probably saved the lives of Sir Ernest Shackleton and his men while they were exploring the Antarctic in 1909. The party lost its way and couldn't find its food depot, which was below the horizon. Atmosphere refraction suddenly lifted it into view long enough for the starving men to set their course toward it.
