ing-in ceremonies for which a national holiday had been decreed. There was no indication as to when the Ramirez administration might be sworn in.

Congress Dissolved

Rawson's communique was addressed to the national armed forces and said: "Having fulfilled the aim to overthrow the government and being unable to reach an agreement on the constitution of the cabinet, I deliver to Gen. Pedro Ramirez my irrevocable resignation from the position as chief of the provisional government, for which I was scheduled to swear oath today."

Ramirez addressed the armed forces and the people in a communique which said: "On this date I take charge of the provisional government and command of the national armed forces."

The rapid change in Argentina's confusing political situation followed by only a few hours the issuance of a decree by Rawson dissolving congress, which was to have convened tomorrow. The decree said that "at the proper time, measures will be taken for the constitution of a new congress."

There were no further details on the disagreement between the two leaders of the revolution.

Some observers expressed the opinion, however, that Rawson had been considered from the very first as not quite in line with the ultra rightist political tinge of his new ministers.

Ramirez was generally regarded as having more pronounced rightist tendencies than Rawson, but the effect his leadership would have on Argentina's foreign policy was not immediately clear.

with no restrictions placed on their activities."

Burns cited statements of residents of the district to the effect a large party of the Japanese were seen smoking within a fire restricted national forest area, that others were seen on the property of a rancher who was absent from home at the time and who afterwards reported the theft of a radio, private papers and other articles.

"The Japanese, when they work, have done very well with their agricultural project in the center and at construction work supervised by Caucasian overseers," Burns said. "But no effective method has been found to keep them at work the full day they are supposed to put in for their compensation. They start late and quit early, and strikes are of frequent occurrence."

Commenting on the Tule Lake riots in March and April Burns said they apparently were caused by the distribution of a questionnaire, one question of which dealt with the evacuees' willingness to renounce allegiance to the Japanese emperor.

Liquidation of OPA To Be Congress Bill

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP)—Rep. Hartley (R-N.J.) said today he will introduce legislation to liquidate the office of price administration and transfer its functions to other government agencies.

His bill would transfer the OPA's food control functions to the office of war food administration; gasoline and petroleum management to the office of the petroleum administrator for war; rent functions to the national housing agency, and remaining functions to the office of civilian requirements of the war production board.

JURY VERDICT REACHED AFTER BRIEF DEBATE

Instructions were completed at 8:15 p. m. and the jury filed into the jury room.

Earlier Saturday Titus spent almost five hours on the stand in his own defense telling his story up to the time of the homicide, but of the shooting of his wife and himself he could remember nothing, he testified. He said he and his wife had been quarreling all evening, and then he couldn't remember any more until he woke up in the hospital full of pain and wondering what had happened to him. The defendant's testimony closed the defense's case.

Mentally Normal

Dr. J. L. Haskins, Portland psychiatrist, called to the stand for the prosecution rebuttal, and who had examined Titus at the county jail on May 26, testified that the defendant was perfectly normal mentally at that time.

When questioned by J. C. O'Neill, defense attorney, whether there was such a thing as temporary insanity lasting over a period of hours, Haskins said "Not that I know of."

Prosecution attorney, Clarence Humble, in making the opening summary of the case, briefly reviewed the facts as given by witnesses earlier in the trial and discounted the defendant's plea of temporary insanity. Said Humble: "All that is claimed by the defendant is that he doesn't remember what he did (referring to the homicide). That doesn't mean that he didn't know what he was doing when he did it. Amnesia is not insanity."

Defense Summary

In the defense summary, J. C. O'Neill brought out the fact that Titus was in love with his wife, that her unfaithfulness drove him to distraction, and that he was just driven to the point where he didn't know what he was doing. "Suppose your wife did the same thing," O'Neill asked, "what would you do? There is always the feeling that a man wants to keep his wife, if someone tries to take her away there will be trouble."

District Attorney L. Orth Sisemore in his summary said: "The defense seems to justify the killing of Erma Titus on the fact that she was unfaithful to her husband. You may be driven to distraction but deep down in your heart you know the difference between right and wrong. If Titus hadn't known he had done anything wrong, why did he ask for a coroner, and who was it built up a story for his own protection for self defense in talking to Sheriff Low? He knew he had killed her."

EDITORIALS ON NEWS

were left flat-footed. We couldn't think of a single PRACTICAL reason why pants SHOULD have cuffs. In our secret souls, we knew darned well why. It was because ever since anybody can remember pants always had had 'em—which is the basic reason why men's clothes are as they are. (There's no sound PRACTICAL reason why men should wear neckties, which use up cloth and serve no utilitarian purpose, but they always HAVE worn 'em and so it follows that they always must.)

That's the reason we wanted cuffs on our pants, and felt terribly abused when we couldn't have 'em. Men are great sticklers for precedent.

AND here's one for the book:

Women, who scorn cuffs on pants as useless, are strong for neckties, whose only possible practical purpose is to keep gravy off shirtfronts, and always say cutting things when their men show up tieless.

SHUCKS! This subject is running into ilimitable distances and unpredictable by-ways—like New Deal experiments. What was intended in the first place was to point out that about the time we had decided to do our bit to win the war by doing without cuffs on our pants we read in the papers that cuffs are BACK AGAIN with the full blessing of the powers that be.

That's the trouble with this home front war.

As soon as one gets over his peeve at being TOLD to do something, or NOT to do something, and all reconciled to doing what he was told to do or not to do, he learns that the original theory was a mistake and that it's now necessary to do something else. It's extremely confusing.

THE war on the home front seems to be tough everywhere.

There's the case of the gal who by mistake dropped a $5 gold piece in the slot of an Indiana parking meter and when she discovered her error started hunting a policeman to help her get it out.

At that moment the devastating thought struck her that OWNING a gold piece is a federal crime and she'd better NOT see a policeman.

AND also the Kansas City woman of the privileged classes whose butler lost his false teeth in a crap game.

She knew her straight-laced husband would fire the villain if he found it out and she simply COULDN'T do without a butler. So she had to drag the pawnshops to get the phoney chompers back.

Life on the home front these days is almost TOO complicated.

al Italian navy in the Mediterranean.

(The Italians also said their fighter planes brought down four four-engine bombers and anti-aircraft guns downed a fifth in the allied raids on Messina, Reggio Calabria and other localities on the Messina strait. They acknowledged further bombing of Pantelleria.)

In the Pantelleria raids, the Italians asserted seven allied planes were brought down by their fighters and anti-aircraft guns. They said German fighter planes brought down two other bombers south of Sicily and a Spitfire near Lampedusa island. Three Italian planes were lost, it was said.

(Another Rome radio broadcast said 50 were killed and seven injured in the vicinity of Reggio Calabria.)

Fleet Blasted

Allied announcements said 19 axis planes were shot down in all operations against the loss of one allied craft, this one of those attacking Pantelleria.

Both the strategic and tactical air forces of the North African command concentrated efforts over the weekend on Pantelleria and in the raid upon the Italian fleet base at La Spezia, which drew the largest formation of Flying Fortresses ever dispatched from North Africa.

FR's Grandson Trips Over Rifle; Young Friend Killed

PHILADELPHIA, June 7 (AP)—Ten-year-old William Bonner Roosevelt, son of Col. Elliott Roosevelt and grandson of the president, tripped over a .22 caliber rifle in his home last evening and as the gun fell it discharged, killing Lewis Hutchinson, 11, his best friend.

Coroner W. J. Rushong, of Montgomery county, reported that young Hutchinson, son of a prominent Ardmore, Pa., broker, was pronounced dead at Bryn Mawr hospital when taken there shortly after the accident by Billy's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Winsor. An autopsy disclosed the bullet penetrated the boy's lung and liver, causing hemorrhages.

An inquest will be held later, the coroner announced. State Policeman James Hagan said Billy was released in custody of his mother.

The accident occurred, the coroner said, about 5:30 p. m. at "Mist Valley," the 168 acre suburban home of Mrs. Winsor on the West Chester Pike. Billy and Lewis had been playing with bows and arrows, and were running into the house to get more arrows when young Roosevelt tripped over the gun. The day before the two boys under supervision of a caretaker, had been shooting with it.

As the gun discharged, Lewis staggered back out the door and collapsed on the front steps. Billy, seeing his friend was wounded, ran upstairs for a first aid kit and informed his mother.

Mrs. Winsor, daughter of William H. Donner, retired steelman, married Col. Roosevelt in January, 1932. They were divorced in 1933 and in 1937 Mrs. Winsor married Curtin Winsor, now a navy lieutenant. She obtained a divorce at Titusville, Fla., last March.

Billy, born in November, 1932, has been a favorite of his grandmother, the wife of the president, and a frequent visitor at the White House and Hyde Park. He and young Hutchinson had been chums since their kindergarten days at Episcopal academy. Lewis was a weekend guest at the Winsor home when the accident occurred.

ROOSEVELT TALKS TO FOOD DELEGATES

Forty-four nations were represented at the conference, which proposed a permanent United Nations organization be set up to consider post-war food problems and that an interim commission operate pending its establishment.

The president said that solution to questions of greater industrial production, greater purchasing power, trade barriers and international finance were outside but essential to the food conference. He said they required and would receive united attention.

"In the political field," Mr. Roosevelt said, "these relationships are equally important. And they work both ways. A sound world agricultural program will depend upon world political security while that security will in turn be greatly strengthened if each country can be assured of the food it needs. Freedom from want and freedom from fear go hand in hand.

"Our objective can be simply stated: It is to build for ourselves, for all men, a world in which each individual human being shall have the opportunity to live out his life in peace; to work productively, earning at least enough for his actual needs and those of his family; to associate with the friends of his choice; to think and worship freely; and to die secure in the knowledge that his children, and their children, shall have the same opportunities."
