Langell Valley

Tim Twomey, second victim of tick fever reported in Lake county this year, was admitted to Lakeview public hospital Sunday night. Twomey, who had been tending his flock of sheep on the desert near Plush, came to Lakeview over the weekend as he had not been feeling well for several days.

Cecil Aldridge on New Pine creek died Wednesday evening about 5 o'clock from injuries received while at work in the mill of the Crane Creek Lumber company at Willow ranch. The accident happened about 4:40 Wednesday afternoon and, while he was rushed immediately to the hospital here, died before he reached Lakeview.

Announcement was made this week that Robert Belknap of Junction City had been hired as principal of Central school, the position left vacant with the resignation of Paul Goddard. Belknap has been teaching at Junction City for the past three and one-half years. He is a graduate of Oregon College of Education at Monmouth.

The inevitable high water that comes every year down the canyon hit the New Pine Creek community Tuesday with a bang, as sort of an after-beat to the first spell of heavy rain which began early Sunday morning. The swollen creek with its muddy turbulent waters endeavored to spread itself into the typical alluvial fan shape as it surged out of the canyon into the valley, filling up some basements, washing out gardens, and making itself a general nuisance to those living along its banks or in old channels to either side.

John Wesley Meyers, a resident of this community for 29 years, died at the relief home here Tuesday. He was born in San Jose, Calif., on November 17, 1872, coming here to work as a ranch hand.

John J. O'Keeffe, well-known and highly respected sheepman of the Adel community, died Monday evening at his sheep camp in that vicinity.
