

SOCIETY

By NADINE PALMERTON

James Hunter and son, Jim

Fathers' day

TOMORROW is June twentieth and in homes all over the country Father will come in for his due share of pampering. For the first time since a year ago, he'll get a chance to have his own way about things that he should have his say about all year. Yes, Father will be king for a day.

There will be many dads this year who will not have their sons or daughters with them. Or there may be many families who do not have Father with them this year. But the family will be together in spirit just the same.

Mother is usually the member of the family that gets most of the credit, and well she might. But dad should not be forgotten, because the old saying is true—"It's Father who pays."

Let's not make Kather king for just a day, but make him king for always.

Hunter picture by Kennell-Ellis.
Others by Kathleen Livingston.

John Hawkins, daughter Joan and twins Howard and George

George McIntyre and son, Donald

Bill, Fred Southwell, Bob and Jimmy. The dog is Rex

Jimmy Sisemore and dad, L. Orth Sisemore

