Mystery Shrouds Death of Wealthy English Baronet

NASSAU, Bahamas, July 10 (AP)—Meager details which came through censorship today served only to deepen for the outside world the mystery surrounding the death of one of the British Empire's wealthiest baronets, Sir Harry Oakes.

The only fact known generally was that there were injuries on the body of the 68-year-old American-born gold mine owner who was found dead in bed yesterday by a friend who called for an appointment.

Foul play was indicated, however, by the summoning from Miami of two American police experts to aid the Nassau constabulary in the investigation.

A coroner's inquest was called behind closed doors.

principal land-owner and businessman. He came here in 1935, attracted by the colony's low tax rates.

He spent large sums in various developments, buying the principal hotel, opening a Bahamas airline, operating a Nassau bus line, improving the country club and golf course and demonstrating the feasibility of vegetable and dairy farming on an island once considered barren.

His latest enterprise was a 1000-acre sheep ranch, and he had postponed a trip to the United States for the purpose of showing the project yesterday afternoon to Nassau newspapermen.

Among his friends was the Duke of Windsor, who cancelled appointments yesterday to take a hand in the investigation.

Pitti Sing Has Lived One Hundred Adventurous Years, Acted Before Royalty, Now Settled Down in West

TILLAMOOK, July 10 (AP)—Pitti Sing was 100 years old last May 21 but her fingers still have a bouncy touch for a Gilbert and Sullivan tune.

She is Elizabeth Barker Percy, born in Manchester and entering her second century in this village on the western edge of America where she settled because it reminded her of Ireland.

Widowed at the age of 29 with five hungry sons, Elizabeth Barker Puenjer obtained a job as pianist at the London Savoy theatre in 1873. Her first task was playing for rehearsals of the Mikado.

One day she had the temerity to criticize the entrance of the three little maids, who walked with rather husky strides.

"They don't have women athletes in Japan," she raged. "No Japanese maid would ever walk like that."

"So-o-o," cooed one of the leads, "suppose you show us how."

She did, the director caught the entrance and the next day the pianist was told to "see Mr. Sullivan." Mr. Sullivan wanted to know where she got her information on the ambulation style of Japanese maids.

Other Ideas "From books," she replied. Mr. Sullivan asked if she had any other ideas. She outlined them and demonstrated. At the end of the conference she was Pitti Sing, feminine lead in the liltting comic opera which was four-star in that and many succeeding seasons.

Her first appearance before royalty produced an entrance scarcely traditional to a Japanese female. Pitti fell flat on her face.

"Pitti Sing, you know, is something of a clown," reminisced Mrs. Percy on her 100th birthday, "so I saved my face by clowning the act for a few minutes. I don't think anyone realized the fall was accidental but the director cautioned me afterward . . . 'from now on you will play Pitti Sing right side up.'"

The Oregon centennarian married Thomas Percy of Manchester, cotton mill machinery expert, in 1885, traveled with him to many parts of the world including Mexico where she established a friendship with Pancho Villa through her proficiency as a baker of biscuits.

As a musician and actress she knew the great and the near great in England and America for half a century. A particularly fond recollection was a slide down a staircase rail 94 years ago at the home of a child friend.

She landed on a bearskin rug at the bottom at the feet of a strange man who picked her up. The man was Charles Dickens.

Percy died in Mexico City and the Pitti Sing of the Savoy's 1893 season came to America after the revolution, teaching piano in Portland. She moved to Tillamook in 1912.

"I never expected to last so long," she remarked at the end of her first 100 years, "and I have no formula for longevity. I've always taken care of myself and I treat my stomach right."

RE-IDENTIFIED KANSAS CITY, (AP)—An elderly man was hit by a street car. A bystander stepped closer and gasped: ". . . It's my father!"

He returned home to find his father alive and well.

NORMANDIE TO CARRY TROOPS

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP)—The one-time French super liner Normandie may yet get in the war—as a troop carrier for the United Nations.

Construction of an observation platform and the tearing down of work shacks on the side of the partially submerged hull gave indication yesterday that the job is right here—one of the greatest marine salvage operations in history—is nearing completion.

Workmen were under orders to have the 400-foot observation platform, from which the righting will be watched by naval and other officials, completed by July 15.

Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane told a house appropriations subcommittee last May the total cost of salvaging, rebuilding and outfitting the vessel as a troop transport would approximate $20,000,000.
