

ROGERS NAMED TO PROCURE AIR CADETS

An urgent need for young men between 17 and 26 years of age to apply for enlistment in the army air corps was expressed here this week by a representative of Colonel J. J. Fulmer, state recruiting chief, as he appointed Leslie Rogers, chairman of aviation cadet procurement in Klamath Falls at 412 Main street, or the Elks lodge.

Rogers explains that as local chairman he will have complete information about the army air corps recruiting program and will take applications from those who wish to indicate their desire to be physically and mentally examined by the cadet board when it visits here.

This unusual opportunity to sign for air crew training is offered to two groups. Qualified 17-year-olds may enlist in the army air corps enlisted reserve. Upon their enrollment they will be presented with official aviation cadet "Silver Wings" which will be worn on their civilian clothes to indicate that they are future flying soldiers. These men will not be called until after their eighteenth birthday. They may continue with their civilian employment or education until such time as they are called for training.

Men from 18 to 26 inclusive, who are of draft age, may take the cadet examinations and if found qualified will be authorized to volunteer for induction into the air corps. To be eligible for this program the applicant must not have received his orders to report for induction from his selective service board.

According to the explanation given the local chairman the examining board will visit this district on August 10 and 11 and will conduct the examinations in the Klamath Falls armory. Full information may be obtained from Rogers or from the army recruiting office, 219 Post Office building.

Experiences Behind Enemy Lines Told by Paratroopers

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN SICILY—Two young American paratroopers returned to this armored post command tonight after spending 72 hours behind the enemy's lines disrupting communications, knocking out guns and gathering information.

They are Sgt. Henry Cummings, 22, of Eunice, La., and Pvt. Douglas Clark, 23, of New York City, who became separated from the rest of their units when they jumped behind enemy lines.

"We just made the best of it," Cummings said. "We crawled and walked all night long cutting wires and trying our best not to be discovered. When it was daylight we tried to get our bearings, but we realized we had to lie low because we would have been dead ducks if we didn't."

"We had to shoot our way out of a couple of tight spots," Clark said.

"One time we were hiding alongside the main road behind a tree when a whole column of Italian trucks passed by us. We could have reached out and touched them."

"The last truck stopped right by our tree. The driver spotted us and yelled, so I let him have it. Then the other guy started yelling for help but we didn't want him to give our position away so we poured a little lead into him. He stopped yelling. "Then we high-tailed it out of there, crawling on our bellies and all the time cutting wires and doing all the damage we could."
