

WRA DIRECTOR ARRIVES FOR NEWELL DUTY

Raymond Best has arrived to take over his duties as director of the Tulelake war relocation center.

The new director has already paid two visits to Klamath Falls and said he hopes to become well acquainted with this community and its people.

Best came here from the directorship of the project at Leupp, Ariz. He previously was connected with the projects at Moab, Minidoka and Manzanar, and served in the regional office at San Francisco. Previous to that he was with the soil conservation service.

Born in Michigan, Director Best has worked for many years in western states and considers Port Angeles, Wash., his home. He married Nora Laird, of Salt Lake City, and is the father of three sons, 10, 14, and 21 years respectively. The oldest son is in the United States army air corps.

Best fought in the last war as a marine and is a member of the American Legion. He is also an Elk. After the war he settled in Dubois, Idaho, where he was the proprietor of a merchandise store. He entered the civil service in 1934 in the resettlement project in Idaho which later became part of the soil conservation service.

Best arrived with his family at the Tule lake project Sunday evening and he met representative colonists and spoke to the evacuees in a mass meeting on Tuesday. He likes people and enjoys working with them. He frankly admits that he has enjoyed his work with the war relocation authority more than any other work he has ever done.

Since the announcement that Tule lake was to be a segregation center, newspapers have referred to it as a project for disloyal Japanese. This is not entirely true, according to Best.

Many Japanese-Americans, including citizens, who will reside at the Tule lake center are not disloyal to this country. They merely feel that they have no future here and have expressed a desire to return to Japan or some other country after the war where they can start life anew and where they believe their children will have a better opportunity of making a livelihood.

Since the emphasis of relocation is the scattering of Japanese-Americans throughout the country, some groups, such as professional men, etc., would not be able to make a living in this country as their clients are drawn entirely from Japanese-American communities.

Pie Poison Victims On Road to Recovery

EUGENE, Aug. 7 (P) — The food poisoning outbreak in the Cottage Grove-Eugene area subsided today with approximately 75 persons recovering from the effects of eating tainted pie.

With most patients well on the road to recovery, only one death had been reported, that of a two-year-old boy Thursday.

Dr. C. R. Lindgren, Lane county health officer, said improper refrigeration probably was to blame for contamination of cream pies.

AERIAL SUPREMACY

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (P) — Raccoons raided Joseph Majors' ranch.

He set traps on the ground, dangling chunks of meat over them.

Next morning he found the 'coons had climbed the tree from which the bait dangled. They'd pulled up the strings, eaten the meat, and left the cords thoroughly tangled in the boughs.

Mixup Not So Merry as Private, Woman Exchange Travelling Bags on Bus

CAMP WHITE—As the south-bound bus rolled to a stop at Woodland, Calif., Mrs. Hazel Hagan of 735 Camulos street, Los Angeles, reached for her bag and hurried to change buses.

Hours later, at home, she opened the bag. Instead of fluffy feminine unmentionables she found articles of clothing of an unmistakable origin. Hastily she examined the bag more closely. While it resembled her own, it most assuredly was not.

But picture the consternation of Pvt. Ray Mowrey, many miles eastward at Miller, Neb., as he arrived home on furlough. Still wearing a haggard look—and the same uniform he left with—Pvt. Mowrey reported back here this week for duty as a member of an artillery battalion. In his hand he carried a bag which looked very much like the one he had carried then. But Mowrey hoped no one could guess the contents of that bag. Greeting his first sergeant, Pvt. Mowrey paled a little at the thought of his dreaded secret.

Thanks, however, to the friendliness of a department store manager, to the quarter-master laundry's impeccable records, and—most of all—to Mrs. Hagan's ingenuity, Pvt. Mowrey now can breathe freely once again. With only two clues—an apparently meaningless mark, composed of four numerals and a one-letter prefix, on the strange clothing, plus a sales slip from a Medford, Oregon, store—she wrote a letter. Charles Adair, store manager, reached for his telephone, called the camp laundry.

Pvt. Mowrey and Mrs. Hagan now are arranging an exchange of their mixed-up luggage.

Sergeant Aldon Dallman of Keno tells some of his experiences in Alaska and Attu. Parts of his letter are as follows:

"They say there are no atheists in fox holes. That may be so but you really don't need the fox hole. All it takes is a little artillery fire and a creek bed does just as well. I was never so attached to anything in my life as I was to the bottom of that creek."

"This is quite a place here. You can wish for any kind of weather you want and get it. As long as you wish for rain and fog, you can't miss."

"You have probably heard how treacherous the Japs are, but listen to this one, and I raise my hand and swear it is nothing but the truth. Some of the boys had captured a Jap and were bringing him in. The Jap made motions on his stomach that he was starving, so one of the boys broke out a can of type C. While he was opening it one of the boys figured he would do the Nip a favor, feeling sorry for him. So he started whittling out some chopsticks for the Nip to eat with. He had just finished them and gave them to the Jap, but the Jap, with a gleam in his eye, shook his head and said in good English that he would rather use this—and he reached in his pocket and took out a fork."

Sergeant Dallman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dallman of Keno.

Troops reviewed were the 19th Battalion and Company B of the 1st regiment, and consisted of about 120 men. Men from Malin, Merrill, Chiloquin and Lakeview were present at the review.

The governor was especially interested in the signalling equipment, Van Fleet said. Members of the state guard here constructed 10 field telephones and have a number of semaphore flags.

The companies will meet Sunday morning for maneuvers on the hill north of town, Corporal Jim Fowler said. They will meet at the armory at 8 a. m.

WAC NEEDS WOMEN TO SERVE COUNTRY

First woman sergeant in the American army, Molly Pitcher, heroine of the battle of Monmouth in the Revolutionary war, would be proud of American girls today who are entering the service of their country, feels WAC Recruiter Lt. Betty Herring.

While Molly Pitcher was a combatant, firing the cannon at which her husband was killed, American women of today serve in non-combatant, but nevertheless important work, Lt. Herring said.

Women entering the Women's Army corps are fulfilling a present-day need for women to take the place of men suited for active duty.

Women between the ages of 20 and 50 are eligible to serve their country in the corps. They must be of good health, have no dependents, and no children under 14.

Anyone wishing to enlist in the aid of their country should see Lt. Herring at her headquarters in the Veterans Memorial hall, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., or by appointment. Lt. Herring's phone number of 7383.
