Premiere Showing To Be Held Here

"This Is the Army" Will Be Attraction for Klamath People This Coming Wednesday

The premiere showing of "This Is the Army" has been the cue for the planning of many dinner parties before the show and cocktail parties later. Since this is the first time that any showing of this kind has come to Klamath Falls, Klamath folks are taking advantage of the chance to get together and are giving these affairs.

The movie, which is to be shown this coming Wednesday, August the eighteenth, is being shown simultaneously in cities all over the coast. All proceeds of the box office receipts are to go to the army emergency relief fund, it has been announced.

Senator Marshall Cornett is chairman of the committee working with the ninth service command, the western defense command and officers of the army emergency relief fund. Other members of the committee are Mayor John H. Houston, Mrs. Franklin Weaver, Malcolm Epley and Glen Hout. Working with these people are Major Paul Walters, Lieutenant Kenneth A. Luckey and Lieutenant H. Leon Villinger, all representatives of Brigadier General Amos Thomas, commanding general of Camp White; and Sergeant Angus Newton, formerly of Klamath Falls and with the ninth service command.

All the thrill and glamour of a Hollywood premiere will be had at the Klamath Falls showing, with searchlights and loud speakers. A Camp White color guard and band will also be features of the opening night.

The feature attraction, however, will be on the screen, with the technicolor screen version of the army show which was written by Irving Berlin.
