Miss Ramsay of Evanston, Iowa has been added to the staff. She had one year's training at Hall House in Chicago and will teach music in all three rooms.

Junior Livestock Show to Observe Federal Meat Rules

"All government regulations pertaining to the slaughter and sale of meat will be obeyed to the letter," said Lee Jacobs, general chairman of the Junior Livestock show and sale, when questioned regarding the law in regard to such sales.

Jacobs, who is also an OPA official, advised that livestock on hoof is not a rationed or price regulated item and it is only meat in the carcass which falls under the regulations. "Therefore," he stated, "any person may purchase any of the animals offered at auction at the fairgrounds on September 20, however, we do want the buyers to be fully advised as to what their lawful responsibilities are both regarding slaughter and after slaughtering." Jacobs advised that such information will be released at a later date but wanted it understood that no government regulations will be evaded.

He further stated that due to restrictions most of the individual buyers would be lost this year but packers, retailers and institutions such as hotels, restaurants and logging camps, were ready and eager to bid for the prize animals. Also, it is understood that some individual citizens had expressed a desire to bid well above market for some of the animals and then sell to licensed dealers on hoof at market prices, pocketing the loss in order to encourage the youngsters.

Beauty IS YOUR DUTY

By RITA WHISENANT
Licensed Cosmetologist

FOR a long time here I've been saying that cosmetics build morale. Let me add another to that—a pat on the back builds morale!

HERE'S what I'm getting at. Writing a beauty column every week is sure to get you down, once in a while, just like anything else. Then along comes a letter from a friend in the service, that gives a nice pat on the back for what you're doing, and away you go again!

HE writes about men in the service:
"Every man has his wife's picture in front of him, either on his desk or on the back of his clothes locker. And he wants to always have that same picture of his wife or sweetheart—clean, sweet and attractive to everyone, not just himself."

WHY is he here? To protect those loved ones he left behind. He wants to go back to the same woman he left. And he wants her to maintain her morale. For lost morale on the domestic front means lost morale on the fighting front. Women at home need to be more careful than ever. They need the stimulant that cosmetics will lend in keeping their beauty, and their morale will be maintained."

CAN'T add to that—except that it sure is nice to have someone come along and back up what you've been saying. Yours for better morale, —RITA.
