discussed during the negotiations.

"To meet this eventuality, it was agreed that one of the senior Italian military representatives should not return to Rome. He is now in Sicily.

"Further, Marshal Badoglio arranged to send the text of his proclamation to allied headquarters."

Badoglio's Proclamation
Badoglio issued a proclamation saying the armistice had been requested and granted, and called on all Italian armed forces to "cease all acts of hostility against Anglo-American forces wherever they may be met."

Badoglio instructed the Italians, however, to "oppose attacks from any other quarters,"—a warning that German attempts to interfere would be met by arms.

There still are sizeable German armed forces in Italy.

Events may continue to move swiftly in the coming hours and days.

Geographic Position
Italy's main contribution to Germany in the war was her geographic position, and this is now lost to the Germans except in so far as they may be able to hold on to part of northern Italy themselves.

As soon as the announcement was made, allied planes roared over Italy—not to bomb but to bring the Italians the news that the allies no longer are fighting them.

Pamphlets Dropped
The planes dropped pamphlets telling the Italians that the opportunity has come to take "vengeance on the German oppressors."

The pamphlets declared: "Italians! Backed by the might of the allies, Italy now has the opportunity of taking vengeance on the German oppressors and aiding in the expulsion of the eternal enemy from Italian soil."

The announcement came as dispirited Italian troops by the hundreds surrendered to British and Canadian troops advancing up the Calabrian peninsula, where the allies landed last Friday on the heels of a 38-day Sicilian victory which sent the Germans fleeing to the mainland.

The capitulation came from the government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, who succeeded Benito Mussolini when the junior partner of Adolf Hitler was ousted July 25.

Ignition of the fire and the presence of Day inside the building after the fire started. Day was a virtual invalid, and it was presumed he could not get out, but there was a story that he was seen outside just after the start of the fire.

The officers questioned Joe Cloud, who lived next door and was on the scene when the fire department and police arrived. They said they had not yet obtained a coherent account of the blaze, and are anxious to get in touch with any witnesses who were on hand just after the blaze started.

Day was burned beyond recognition. By the time officers arrived the fire was so hot it was impossible to attempt a rescue.

Police said Day reportedly had $480 in a purse. They were looking through the ashes for remains of the money.

axis, and harbors enemy agents and espionage.

As long as Argentina stays out of the inter-American hemispheric defense setup, it would be folly for the U. S. to allow this country to have American-produced instruments of war, Hull intimated.

Storni, in his letter, recalled the military coup which placed General Pedro Ramirez' government in power and he said the present administration was not fascist nor even sympathetic with the axis.

"Argentine sentiment, eminently American, firmly opposed to totalitarian regimes, is on the side of the United Nations in material and spiritual action," he declared.

The Argentine's principal competitor in South America—Brazil—was praised only today by U. S. Army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall for its early plunge into the war on the allied side and for its work in protecting that theater.

Education of Past And Future Subject Of Talk to Lions

"Education of the Past Compared to that of the Future, and the Part it will Play in the Post-war World," was the subject of a talk presented at the Lions' club meeting Tuesday by Arnold Gralapp, superintendent of the city schools.

Guests during the lunch included three marine sergeants, who were guests of Sgt. Lester Finley. Sgts. Frank and Serrat of the women's marine corps reserve, and Sgt. Farrow of the marines were guests.

part in the Tunisian and Sicilian victories have not participated in the Calabrian invasion, and the Italian surrender leaves them free to strike elsewhere in Europe.

(Axis radio stations broadcast nothing immediately on the capitulation. About an hour earlier the German radio told of fresh British troop landings near Pizzo, about 30 miles north of the place where British and Canadian troops had been last reported fighting).

DONETS BASIN SWEEP CLEAN OF GERMANS

much area west of Konotop where the red army pushed on up to seven miles.

South of Bryansk another advance went forward more than six miles while gains were made west and southwest of Kharkov.

The Russian announcement of the capture of Stalino came a few hours after the Germans reported they had evacuated the steel manufacturing center and destroyed all war installations.

The red army advance also crossed the rail line to Mariupol, 65 miles southwest of Stalino on the Sea of Azov, making it almost certain that Nazi forces which have been fighting east of that town must withdraw to escape entrapment by the southward turning move.

Rail Line Cut
The red army newspaper Red Star reported that other units had severed the main railroad from the Donets basin to Dniepropetrovsk, 115 miles west of Stalino.

The German communique, recorded by the Associated Press, said Stalino, Russia's 12th largest city, had been evacuated "to shorten the front" after all military installations had been destroyed.

Russian dispatches indicated Stalino fell in flanking moves rather than by direct assault.

Nazis Killed
This new victory followed upon Moscow's announcement that the red armies had killed more than 420,000 Germans, wounded 1,080,000 and captured 38,800 in taking back at least 30,000 square miles of occupied territory since July 5.

Stalino, a city of about 500,000 pre-war population, was taken by the Germans in October, 1941, and the Russians never had been able to wrest it back until now.

Good Base
At the hub of a railway system serving the Donets basin, Stalino is an excellent base for a possible thrust southwest to pinch the invaders completely out of their foothold in the Kuban and in the Crimea.

The German war bulletin said the Donets battle was raging with "undiminished violence."

The Russians said their armies were advancing all along the 600-mile front, and the Germans, as in the case of Taganrog and other cities, were the first to announce that Stalino had fallen.

The tremendous German casualties were announced in a special soviet communique broadcast from Moscow last night. Listed also were staggering losses in war material, the Russians reporting they had destroyed 5729 warplanes, 8400 tanks, 5192 guns and more than 28,000 trucks. Captured material included 1041 tanks, 2018 guns, 3382 machineguns and 7953 trucks.

There was no reference in the Russian recapitulation to their own losses, which the Germans have asserted were extremely heavy.

Eagle's Auxiliary—The Eagle's Auxiliary will hold its regular meeting Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Eagle's hall. A potluck will be held afterwards for auxiliary and aerie members. Each person should bring a covered dish of food.

Park Birds Create Food, Fuel Problem

The birds at Moore park are presenting a problem, with no fuel oil in sight to heat the bird house for the winter. Plans presented at the park board meeting on Tuesday afternoon were to farm the birds out for the duration to anyone who would be interested in keeping them. Food bills would be paid by the board.

If this plan does not work out satisfactorily, O. D. Matthews has offered to keep the birds in a room on his property on Fourth street.

Meat for the animals is also very hard to get and it is feared that something will have to be done with them unless more meat is available.

E. E. Spencer, caretaker at Moore park reported that, as a whole, attendance at the park had been lower this year than last. This is attributed to the fact that people are working more and they are saving their gas for longer trips.

Parachuted Field Artillery Fires On Japs at Lae

strong offensive patrol of 100 Japanese troops were routed with heavy casualties near Singau plantation, 10 miles east of Lae on Monday by Australian infantry which had landed on the New Guinea coast 48 hours earlier.

The troops were advancing westward along the Uon gulf toward Lae itself and were approaching the Busu river, only five miles from Malahang, one of the threatened city's main air-dromes.

The Australians were within the range of enemy guns at Lae, but they have not been fired, as yet. The silence of these weapons indicated the effectiveness of the heavy aerial pounding of Lae by Liberator bombers before the allied invasion Saturday.

The field guns dropped from transport planes Sunday were assembled "as quickly as men could find the pieces in tall grass" and now have been rolled into position and placed in action, headquarters announced.

Roosevelt to Open Third War Loan Campaign Tonight

The broadcast, originating in Washington and Hollywood, will include an all-star cast of motion picture and radio headliners. Mr. Roosevelt will speak at about 8:40 p. m.

which had been hit previously in recent days. The announcement, from the U. S. army's European theater headquarters, said RAF, dominion and allied Spitfires escorted the bomber fleets.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio declared that American bombers had struck in "violent attack" at Amiens and had pounded Abbeville twice more, but there was no announcement from allied air officials of new raids against these oft-battered objectives.

Mosquito Raids
Mosquito bombers pounded enemy airfields and rail targets in France and Belgium, the air ministry announced, to keep the air offensive rolling through another night, and naval planes destroyed a German E-boat in the channel.

Although the RAF's heavy bombers took their first layoff in three nights in the large-scale bombardment of German industrial centers and railroads leading into Italy, the night forays of the swift Mosquitos and the daylight attacks by allied bomber formations carried the non-stop offensive against western Europe into its seventh day.

Railways Hit
Rail targets at Amiens and Abbeville already had been hit twice before by allied airmen in the past week.

The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by the ministry of information, said two British "nuisance raiders" flew over German territory last night. One plane of the Mosquito type was brought down by anti-aircraft guns on the German-Dutch frontier, the broadcast said.

The latest blows against the west side of the European fortress came after one of the heaviest days in the week-long series of assaults yesterday when American heavy and medium bombers and fighters joined British air units in blasting enemy objectives on land and sea.

Night Fire Melts Car; Razes Trailer House, Buildings

A fire at 8:49 Tuesday night destroyed a trailer house, car, and several buildings in the 1800 block on Wantland street. The fire was on the property occupied by Clay Green, 1825 Wantland street, and destroyed a trailer house belonging to H. W. Gleditsch and an automobile belonging to Ray Hawkins.

Records indicate that dive bombing was first used by the marines in Haiti.

Capitulation of Italy Poses Many New Questions

By The Associated Press

These questions arose from the Italian surrender today:

1. What becomes of the Italian fleet, which is built around seven battleships and is split between Pola on the Adriatic and Spezia on the Italian west coast?
2. Will the Germans retire from the Po valley in the north, where they have been reported to have as many as 15 or 20 divisions?
3. What happens to the 25 or 30 Italian garrison divisions in the Balkans and France? And to the 250,000 Italian workmen estimated in Germany?
4. What effect will the Italian surrender have on the wavering morale of Hitler's Balkan satellites of Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Croatia? Hungarian policy has been linked more closely with Italy than with Germany and all the Balkan states have shown increasing signs of war weariness.
5. Does the surrender include the French island of Corsica, barely 30 miles from southern France, which the Italians occupied when the allies landed in North Africa?
6. Will the scattered German units still in southern and central Italy be allowed to return to Germany?

Hitler Orders Reorganization In War Industry

LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Hitler has ordered a complete reorganization of Germany's bomb-hampered war production, the German radio reported today in a broadcast of a decree dated September 2.

Wider powers were given Albert Speer, minister for armaments and production, who was placed in charge of all Nazi production.

Nazi Minister of Economics Dr. Walther Funk was delegated the responsibility for "the general trend of economic policy, for supply of the civilian population, for currency problems, for foreign trade, and for financing German economy and the economy of protectorates." Funk was called into the central planning committee.
