Strongmen Ready for Sunday Contest

Two of America's outstanding weight lifters will visit Klamath Sunday for the Oregon State weight lifting championships to be held in the high school gym at 2 o'clock. C. K. Lundborg, right, is recognized as having the best built body in the world for his height. Jack DeMent, left, can put double his own weight over his head with two hands.

you? They even got perky shirts now. After a slow start this season, the Commercial and Booster leagues came right up and had a nice season. Only hope that when next season rolls along we can all get together again for a kegle clash or two.

A couple of years ago I wrote the bowling column for you but only mentioned the scores and winners I didn't know. This year I really enjoyed writing this column because I knew you all and you all knew me and you could bowl the "devil" out of me or kiss me... which to my knowledge was never done.

I only hope I'll be around next year. Sort o' glad one or two of my jokes were liked or scorned upon. Wishing the kegling season wasn't over so I could keep this up, but comes summer, comes fishing, comes tennis, comes the boids and what have you.

Well, bye bye. See you on the street, at the alleys or in the pool halls. Thanks for your cooperation.

Marshall Grabs Nod Over Kahut

PORTLAND, May 27 (P)—Lloyd Marshall, duration light-heavyweight champion from Cleveland, took advantage of his superior experience last night to win eight of his 10 rounds against Joe Kahut, Woodburn, Ore., scrapper.

The veteran negro solved Kahut's slow crouch and piled up points in the early going although missing more than he landed. Kahut scored two rights early in the second round but Marshall jabbed to his head and staggered the Oregonian with a hook to the jaw.

After scoring the knockdown in the sixth round, Kahut tried desperately to put his opponent away with rights and lefts to the head, but the clever Marshall fell back on his experience and covered up.

The scheduled eight-round semi-windup between Jack Huber, 197, coast guard, and Dave Johnston, 206, Portland, was halted in the third round and the referee declared it no contest for stalling.

In prelims, Bobby Rock, 146, Woodburn, and Billy McCann, 145 1/2, Seattle, drew in six rounds. Bobby Wright, 172, Portland, and Sailor Redding, 170, navy, also drew in four.

Weightlifters to Vie Here Sunday for State Title

Some of America's outstanding exponents of strength will come to Klamath Falls Sunday to vie in the Oregon state weight-lifting championships, to be held at 2 p. m., in the high school gymnasium. Fans of the strongman's game, in which huge weights are hoisted overhead, will have an opportunity to see in action such notables as C. K. (Larry) Lundborg and Jack DeMent, both of the Multnomah Athletic club of Portland, Ore.

Lundborg, recognized by experts as having the best built body in the world for his height, weighs in at 225 pounds and stands 6 feet 3 inches—a towering giant who has put 325 pounds overhead. DeMent, one of the few men in the world known to put double his own weight overhead with two hands, will weigh in at 132 pounds.

Both Lundborg and DeMent have been lifting weights for many years, having traveled over the country to pit their prowess against the best. In eight years of stellar lifting they have gathered, between them some 100 titles and distinctions of state, coast, national and world magnitude.

Lundborg, who is lined up with Hollywood for a motion picture contract, is expected to total over 800 pounds in the three Olympic lifts—he holds the present state and Pacific northwest records in these lifts. In addition to now holding the Western Canadian-International title.

Out-of-Ropes Climax Gives Wagner Nod Over Katonen

Gorgeous George Wins Two Falls After Hot Action; Piluso Loses Opening Go

Paavo Katonen lived up to expectations. True, he didn't whip George Wagner—a freak out-of-the-ropes climax gave Gorgeous George the final and deciding fall—but the solid Finn tore around the ring in uproarious fashion to give the crowd the best action seen in the local army wrestling ring in many a moon.

The coast champion and Wagner started off tamely enough. After nine minutes of quiet, temperless wrestling display, Paavo meekly gave Wagner the first fall after nine minutes of arm and leg work climaxed by a barrage of typical Wagnerian blows.

The fireworks started in the second round. Somehow Gorgeous George aroused Paavo's ire. (Fans suspect that eye-gouging and fistie endeavor were responsible.) So Paavo revenged himself somewhat for the injustices of the wrestling game by slapping George against the ropes and pounding him solidly with his fist, head and shoulder.

Groggy George refused to give up, so Katonen utilized a trick all his own. This masterpiece of wrestling endeavor consisted of pulling the opponent's head down suddenly and leaping into the air, cracking his noggin with the knees on the way up. Its effects are well-known, and after five or six of these, Gentle George allowed Paavo to hold him down for the three-count.

Thus the falls stood at one-all. Wagner recovered quite quickly from Paavo's pounding, after enlisting the aid of the referee and the second to minister water and towel. The ref by this time also needed the aid of a physician. He suffered a cut lip when hit by Wagner's shoe in the opening round and now was continually dabbing at the cut with a towel.

At the opening of the third round, Katonen came out expecting to batter George into quick submission and ring down the curtain on the evening's show. George took a few licks on the chin, and then by a lucky break countered by throwing Katonen half out of the ring. Katonen struggled to return, but Wagner grabbed one foot wrapped it in the ropes and left Katonen dangling over the edge of the mat.

Seeing his opportunity, Wagner leaped from the ring, grabbed Katonen's other foot and started tugging on it with mayhem at heart. If spectators and police had not joined in the fray, George may have split Paavo right down the middle.

While fans held George, Referee Wally Moss loosened Katonen's foot imprisoned in the ropes. This dumped Paavo right on his noggin on the hard board floor. Dazed, the big Finn climbed back in the ring, but George finished him off with a series of hammer-like blows and some leg work.

An admirable conclusion saw police and fans climb into the ring to keep apart the Finn and Wagner. Paavo, in righteous indignation, was protesting the decision, and though nothing official has come of it, offered to put up a scandalous sum of money for the chance to come back at Gorgeous George.

The semi-windup event saw Herb Parks and Buck Lipscomb draw after a rough crowd-pleasing match. The first round ended without a fall, but Buck opened up in the second to take the first win. Parks came back in the third round to win a nod, and the boys struggled through the fourth round without a decision.

Ernie Piluso—the local wrestling fan's favorite—took a walloping from Harold "Buck" Davidson in the opening event, but not until he had so thoroughly aroused the crowd that some of them climbed into the ring with him to aid in his struggle for mat justice.

Tompkins Aroused By Myer Statement On Japs Return

PORTLAND, Ore., May 27 (P)—Dillon S. Myer's statement that Japanese should be returned to the Pacific coast as soon as the military situation warrants has aroused the ire of Morton Tompkins, master of the Oregon state grange.

"Oregon, California and Washington still are part of the union," declared Tompkins, "and before any action of this nature is taken we want to have something to say about it."

While coast residents have maintained silence to avoid jeopardizing welfare of American war prisoners in Japanese hands, Tompkins said, "sobsters from other parts of the nation have been laying the groundwork for returning evacuees to this area."
