Cards were in play and several gifts of appreciation and remembrance were presented to the honored guest.

To benefit his health, Bill is moving to a lower altitude, going from here to Ashland. After that his plans are indefinite. D'Lury has made his home here for the past 14 years during which he has kept the grounds in parklike order around the church and parish house at Eighth and High streets, and his flowers have been the envy of many gardeners. Kindness Works Better Than Fire in Making Mule Move, Pvt. Strader Finds

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, Italy—After four weeks of mule skinning on the rugged Cassino front, Private Adrian L. Strader of Klamath Falls, Ore., recently concluded, "a mule reacts to kindness."

Strader drove a mule up an Italian mountain nightly to deliver rations to the fifth army infantrymen who were holding the line and reported the going tough. "When everything else failed to make the mule move," he said, "we had to drag out our candy and sugar rations. In exchange they would plug along a little further up the slippery trail until they got hungry again—then we lost some more candy on the deal."

The muleskinner, more quiet sector of this mountainous front, described the hardships men on the Cassino front endured. "Most of the time we were there it rained."

"There was water everywhere and the nights were black."

"In addition to being steep, the rain made the trail terribly slippery," he continued. "However, the dusk to dawn trip had one bright aspect—we rode the mules back after pushing them up the mountain. Made it about an even break, I guess."

The mule convoy, numbering about 12 mules and the same number of "skinners," was often under heavy German artillery and mortar fire. "They knew where the trail was and let go every once in a while," Strader said.

"When shells came too close we hit the dirt. The mules, unable to get down, were often killed or put out of action," he stated. "When we lost a ration

LEGION AUXILIARY SELLS 6000 POPPIES

Mrs. Hal Ogle, poppy chairman, today thanked everyone who worked to make the sale a success and the public for its response.

Mrs. Ogle said that credit should go to the Girl Scouts who sold poppies at booths in several local stores, to the Camp Fire Girls, who in costume, worked all day Saturday along Main street and to Camp Fire groups at Chiloquin, Fort Klamath and Weyerhaeuser who distributed poppies in their districts.

Poppy headquarters were in the Red Cross rooms and the Red Cross also gave space for a window display which was arranged by the Legion auxiliary president, Mrs. Carl Schubert.

Community Service Chairman Mrs. Fred LaForge also wishes to thank all persons who gave flowers for Memorial Day use. She announced Wednesday that 162 wreaths and sprays were prepared for use at the cemetery and appreciation is expressed to the people who helped arrange the floral pieces.
