Crusade Aimed At Portland's High Living Costs

PORTLAND, June 3 (AP)—A crusade to drive living costs down in this area was under way today. Backers said 50,000 persons would be enrolled.

Shipyards workers, who made up a committee on price investigation, said the crusaders would "use every legal means to put profiteers out of business." This will include refusing to buy commodities for more than ceiling prices and spurning non-ceiling commodities that are priced too high.

Jerry Parks, a shipyard supervisor, declared at a mass meeting that his $62.50 weekly pay check dwindles to less than a dollar after all deductions and costs of living are taken out.

CAUTION URGED

PORTLAND, June 3 (AP)—Warning that malaria-type mosquitoes have been found in this area and that they may spread the disease by biting infected war veterans from the South Pacific, Portland health authorities urged city commissioners to take precautionary measures.

LARGER HOSPITALS FAVORED BY LEGION

PORTLAND, Ore., June 3 (AP)—Enlargement of Pacific northwest hospital facilities for war veterans by more than 5000 beds was urged today by an American Legion rehabilitation and World War II liaison conference.

Delegates from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Alaska asked the veterans administration for: 1500 general medical and tuberculosis beds and 500 beds for mental patients in Oregon; 1500 general medical beds in western Washington; 500 general medical and 500 tuberculosis beds in eastern Washington; 500 additional beds in Idaho; at least one veterans' hospital in Alaska.

Other resolutions urged transfer of army and navy relief administration from the American Red Cross back to the army and navy; that veterans discharged for disability be given 90 instead of 40 days to apply for their old jobs; that discharge papers record all technical training; improved rating schedule to determine disability payments; return of rating authority to regional offices from area offices; discharge of neuropsychiatric cases through installations nearest their homes.

Stars of Summer Return To Vast Floor of Heaven

By J. HUGH PRUETT
Astronomer, General Extension, University of Oregon

The stars of summer are now returning and one by one are taking their places on the orchestral floor of heaven. In a few weeks they will dominate the celestial scene and the "music of the spheres," so characteristic of the summer evenings, will again be in full harmony—and so silently!

That summer is again with us is clearly indicated by the short arc the full moon traverses low across the southern sky. The moon is above the horizon only about nine hours. In winter at this phase it is high in the sky and at times imparts continuous cheer for over 15 hours. The full moon always follows the sky path taken by the sun six months earlier.

Another herald of summer is the appearance low in the southeast of the bright red star Antares, the heart of the Scorpion. In fading twilight its energetic twinkling will attract attention in that part of the sky. Antares will be slightly farther west each succeeding evening and in the fall will be lost in the sunset.

About the time the sky is dark, still another summer reminder is peeping above the horizon at a point nearly due east. This is bright Alair, the principal star in the constellation the Eagle. At the same time, well up in the sky somewhat north or east, Vega is splendid. Farther northeast Deneb in the Northern Cross is less brilliant.

Now if we look toward the south we shall see blue-white Spica fairly well up in the sky. Very high in the same general direction orange Arcturus at the lower point of the celestial kite is very prominent.

Toward the west we immediately sight the brightest starlike object in the evening sky. This huge planet, Jupiter, boasts a diameter 11 times that of our earth and an obedient retinue of 11 moons. Mars is still visible but is rather an unimpressive non-twinkling reddish object a little distance below and to the right of Jupiter. Saturn is now setting at dusk. Of these three planets, only Jupiter is now a good object. Venus is too close to the sun at present to be seen. The morning and evening skies are now rather deficient in planets.

Regulus, a fairly bright star seen a little above and to the left of Jupiter, is at the lower end of The Sickle, a stellar diagram easily noted if a little at-

Attention is given this part of the sky.

Some distance above the horizon and considerably north of west are the bright stars Pollux and Castor, the twins, standing side by side. Far over in the northwest, brilliant Capella swings toward the northern horizon.

West's Hope Lies With New Deal, Claims Hannegan

SEATTLE, June 3 (AP)—Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the democratic national committee, asserts the greatest hope of the west in establishing permanent large scale peacetime industries lies in the continuation of the present democratic administration which, he said, "is in tune with the progressive spirit of the west."

He confidently predicted a victory for the democratic party led by President Roosevelt in the November elections.

The occasion was a fund-raising rally last night sponsored by the democratic state committee and was marked by a $10-a-plate banquet in the Masonic temple.

Black Market In Strawberries Hit

SEATTLE, June 3 (AP)—The office of price administration here today called on housewives to fight a black market in strawberries. The ceiling for locally grown strawberries in the 19 western and central Washington counties is 23 cents per pint box, but almost none are to be had because of the late season and the processors' demands.

The result, the OPA said, was that the few available are sold in flagrant violation of the regulations, at 45 to 50 cents a pint.

REPAIRING OF SEWAGE PLANT EXPECTED SOON

Parts for the city disposal plant located near the old Great Northern roundhouse should arrive here at any time, according to City Engineer E. A. Thomas.

The plant has been down most of the winter and at the present time sewage is being chlorinated and dumped into Lake Ewauna. It takes a matter of months under present conditions for parts to be replaced.

Thomas said that there was nothing to fear from this method of handling the city's sewage in view of the fact that the chlorine process is thoroughly observed. The sewage is rapidly carried away at the point where it empties into the lake by a strong current. There is no basis for fear of contamination to either human beings or fish life, Thomas said.
