

HOUSING JOB MOVES UNDER FULL STEAM

A large force of carpenters now at work on houses and trailers at the federal public housing site on Mitchell and Shasta Way, promises rapid completion of the superstructures, and tenants may be able to move into the trailers as early as July 1.

The project, which started out on a sort of an again off again basis suffering one delay after another, now is showing definite progress. Harry R. Gamble, federal project engineer, in charge of the work here, said the entire site is a beehive of activity this week.

Forty apartments are now in the process of construction, and just adjacent to this site, a trailer park with 50 house trailers has been started.

The trailers renting for $6 per week will be equipped with electricity, water and heat in the utility trailers. They have been promised to tenants by July 1. Trailer tenants will be eligible to move into the apartment houses as fast as they become available.

K. T. Henderson, general contractor for both projects, has proceeded with care during these first few weeks of layout and foundation work, according to Gamble. Henderson, Gamble said, has promised an all-out effort to complete as rapidly as possible.

Gamble expressed confidence in the work to date and is pleased with the local cooperation, skill of the workmen and enthusiasm for housing in this community.

Information about these housing units may be obtained at the EPHA site office, 1629 Mitchell, Phone 8519.

CHILDREN WARNED OFF AIRPORT ROADS

Parents of younger children in the South Sixth street district were asked this week to try to keep their youngsters as much as possible off the roads running out to the airport because of the danger from cars and trucks on these lanes.

County Engineer Wally Hector has been requested by the state to issue this warning. Many of the heavily-loaded trucks constantly going back and forth from the airport travel quite rapidly, Hector said, and it might be hard for one to stop quickly should a child run out in front of it. Especially heavy with traffic are S. 6th, Summers lane and Altamont drive.
