Women Voters

Concerted action by the League of Women Voters in 600 communities has been launched in an effort to secure foreign policy platform pledges by both republican and democratic parties which would put both parties on record for United States participation in plans for international cooperation. The League is backing what it considers four essential points for our foreign policy.

1. Recognize the fact that the security and welfare of the United States can best be served through international cooperation.

2. Pledge that the United States will take the initiative in leading other nations to agreement on international policies.

3. Pledge that the United States will become a member of a permanent international organization and will agree to the joint use of military force to suppress future attempts at military aggression by any nation.

4. Pledge that the United States will cooperate now with other countries in solutions of political, social and economic problems that are pressing, such as political policy in liberated or axis countries, relief and reconstruction, stabilization of currencies, air commerce, post-war shipping—pledge that the United States will maintain a tariff policy which will promote, not obstruct, international trade.

E. P. Ivory, delegate to the democratic convention and the only delegate from Klamath for either party, when asked to comment on the League stand made the following statement:

"The statement of position with respect to the post-war world wherein the League of Women Voters commits itself to a position of international cooperation, and urges the United States to take a prominent part in developing such an agreement, is highly gratifying to me. I have been a firm believer in this position ever since the last war. The present world-wide catastrophe makes it more than ever imperative that some such steps be taken."

They have obtained the Grange hall again, however, and plan to hold a few more meetings here in New Pine Creek, supplementing the "in the home" meetings which they have been holding from time to time.
