FREE GERMAN GENERALS DIE IN RED FIGHT

LONDON, July 3 (AP)—Three German generals have met their death in the battle for Russia, the Nazi communists said today, raising to 19 the number of general officers killed or captured in less than a month.

The calamitous mortality rate of the enemy command dramatized the hopeless situation produced by the outbreak of the "black war" in the air of the fourth front in occupied France where patriots have been increasingly active.

Official allied estimates of casualties since the beginning of the three-front offensive are estimated at 394,000 to date.

Russians have announced the death or capture of 210,000 German soldiers in Norway and those in Italy were estimated at 80,000 to 100,000 about July 1.

The German general told the deaths of Artillery General Pfeiffer and Martinek and Lt. Gen. Schenemann. Thus in June 6, no less than 11 German generals have been killed or captured.

VANCOUVER, Wash., July 3 (AP)—A single-engine naval plane crashed here yesterday after tangling in the limbs of an apple tree and bouncing the roof of a farmer's chicken coop.

They had passed their pre-physical examinations. They were Glenn Terzich, Ross Foster, James V. Madison, J. Delaney and Donald A. Brald.

MEN AND WOMEN IN SERVICE

BACK IN STATES—Gus H. Mosby, WT 1/c, of the Seabees, has returned to the United States from the South Pacific.

He was injured in New Guinea and for two months was a patient in a hospital in Australia. Upon arriving in the United States a few weeks ago, Gus was sent to the U. S. navy hospital in Oakland, Calif., but is now in the navy hospital in San Diego, Calif. Gus Mosby received his basic training in Camp Peary, Va., and finished at Camp Rouseau, Calif. He was with the Southern Pacific Railroad company before enlisting in the Seabees in June, 1943.

SEDALIA ARMY AIR FIELD

First Lieutenant Mathew M. Walker, formerly of Route 1, Klamath Falls, Oregon, was promoted to that rank by Colonel Jerome B. McCauley, station commander of the troop carriers' Sedalia army air field, where Lt. Walker is now stationed.

He was inducted into the service April 14, 1942, and has worked his way up from the ranks, receiving his commission in April 1943.

The assistant technical inspector, which job he now holds, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Walker also of Klamath Falls.

His wife, the former Miss Mary Oranjil of the same city, and the lieutenant are now residing at 2003 Marconi avenue, Sacramento, Calif.

In a recent interview, Lt. Walker said his favorite sports were hunting and flying, but preferred flying best of all.

Arthur William Barth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Barth of Klamath Falls, Oregon, graduated recently from the aviation machinists' mate school at the naval air technical training center, Norman, Okla., it was announced by the navy department today.

Seaman Barth attended Klamath Union high school before enlisting in the navy in September, 1943. Upon graduation from the training school at Norman he received the rate of seaman first class. He will now be transferred to a naval unit afloat or to another shore station for further instruction and work.

William F. Pearce, 2126 Darrow, who recently joined the U. S. maritime service, is now in "boot" training as an apprentice seaman at the Catalina Island USMS training station.

Pearce is busy gaining the knowledge and experience that will enable him to deliver "Victory Cargo" to our fighting forces and our allies throughout the world.

Pine Chemicals Predicted

PORTLAND, July 3 (AP)—Western pine forests may furnish a wide variety of chemicals in the future, Dr. Arthur B. Anderson of the Western Pine association's research laboratory here, said today.

Soluble carbohydrates, phlobaphenes, pigments, fats, resin, fatty acids, resin acids, sterols, waxes and hydrocarbons are some of the possibilities to be found in the western trees, he said.

The lumber would be improved by the extractive process, he added.

TEAGARDEN'S ORCHESTRA TO PLAY IN MALIN

Jack Teagarden and his orchestra will be in Malin's Broadway hall on Tuesday, July 4, according to V. Kalina, manager of the hall.

The question most asked of Jack Teagarden, "king of the blues trombone" is "What are the blues—how does a 'blues' differ from other popular music?"

Jack Teagarden is the logical person to put that question to, for he is regarded as the foremost blues vocalist and trombonist of all time. Famous for his blues singing when he played the trombone for Paul Whiteman, he has included almost every one of the great blues tunes in the repertoire of his own orchestra and plays many popular tunes in the blues idiom. Teagarden uses as his theme song, "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues."

"A real blues," an American folk song, with a 12-bar chorus instead of the usual 32-bar chorus, and played in a minor key with the famous "blues note" as a distinguishing characteristic.

Three Scene Play Featured At Bond Show on July 5

The main attraction of the bond show to be held on July 5 at the Pelican theatre is the one-act, three scene play entitled "The Call of Freedom."

The play is acted out by the WACS and soldiers of the WPCR of Camp White, Medford. The play has been given previously in Medford.

Three scenes make up the entire play. The first scene is set in the home of a soldier who is about to go overseas. The setting of the second scene is in Italy, just before the soldier goes into battle and the scene is supposed to portray a soldier's emotions and feelings before he goes to fight.

The third scene is placed in a hospital back of the battle line and emphasizes the importance of blood plasma.

The Medford Mail Tribune says the play is well acted, and it is greatly enhanced by a "forceful, dramatic narration from off stage."

INTERNEES RECEIVE EQUIPMENT

SALEM—Almost all of the 225 cases of materials shipped to the Far East late in 1943 for the use of United Nations war prisoners and civilian internees have been accounted for, according to information Charles A. Sprague, president of the Oregon war chest, has just received from the national war fund.

In the shipment were baseballs and bats, softballs, and other athletic equipment; musical instruments, phonographs, records and needles, games, and more than 15,000 books of all kinds. Distribution of the cases were as follows: 105 were unloaded at the Philippine islands; 103 at Yokohama for use by war prisoners and internees in Japan, Korea and Formosa, and nine at Hongkong.

These cases were sent to the Far East on the Gripsholm when it sailed last year to effect an exchange between United Nations and axis personnel. The material was made available by war prisoners aid, YMCA, a participating service of the national war fund and the Oregon war chest, to which the Klamath county war chest has turned over part of its proceeds.
