Rescue Service to Organize For Plane Crashes

SALEM, July 7 (AP)—The state civilian defense council, state and federal forest services and the state police are organizing a crash rescue service to rescue grounded military fliers, Jack Hayes, state defense adminitrator, said today.

Hayes said the request for the new organization was made by the fourth army air force, which said it no longer has sufficient military personnel in the state to perform its own rescue work.

The new organization would use the services of forest lookouts.
