

FREE SPEECH UNDER WAGNER ACT CONFUSED

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
WASHINGTON, July 12 (AP) — Free speech rights under the Wagner act appeared further confused today by a seventh circuit (Chicago) federal court decision holding company officials in contempt for newspaper advertisements and other actions preceding a collective bargaining election.

The principals were five officers and agents of the Reliance Manufacturing company at Huntington, W. Va., and the AFL-International Ladies Garment Workers union. On the day employees voted whether they wanted to be represented by the union, and on the preceding day, advertisements appeared with the simple legend, "rely on Reliance." Supervisory employees carried this legend on their person. Two of them added the words, "vote no."

A three-judge court unanimously held the company officials violated a decree enjoining them from interfering with their employees' organizational rights.

"While the management," said the court, "may have a right under some circumstances to express its opinions as to a union or its preference between unions, such right certainly does not extend to a point where it becomes a participant in a contest to which it is not a party."

A. Norman Somers, national labor relations board attorney in charge of compliance, said that while the decision is not directly contradictory to the third circuit (Philadelphia) ruling in the Edward G. Budd case recently, the two are basically related in principle. In the Budd case, the court said "the Wagner act does not purport to authorize a restraint upon the freedom of speech in any circumstances."

Dorris Plans New High School Building

Here is the architect's plan for the Butte Valley high school building at Dorris, to be built as replacement for a structure which burned down last year. First unit to be built, for which WPB has granted priorities, will be the long wing at left, including six classrooms, offices, etc. The auditorium-gymnasium at the right will go up later. Howard R. Perrin, Klamath architect, drew the plans.

To a responsible man with 2 or 3 children

It's no fun being a breadwinner unless you've got a real job. Right now, Southern Pacific has a special opening as Brakeman for the right man. You need to be steady and reliable because this is a responsible job. The work is both vital and interesting. As a Brakeman you work on trains, help operate them, help keep war materials moving. You get around, meet people—and get good money doing it. After a couple of weeks or so of training, you'll make over $200 monthly at base pay. (Some Brakemen make considerably more.) This is an important job with a permanent company—even though it takes no experience to start.
