Today's Roundup

NOT only aviation enthusiasts, but all persons with a stake in the economic welfare of the Klamath country, will find much that interests them in the front page story today telling how Klamath, completely without publicity fanfare, has become the hub of aviation facilities in the northwest.

EPLEY

This well-authenticated story will come as a surprise to many. The expansion of facilities at the Klamath airport itself has been pretty generally known, but little has been said up to this time about the airway development that puts Klamath Falls square in the middle of the regional aviation picture.

In recent weeks, local thinking about this basin's economic future has been stimulated by the publicity given the Bonneville report on Klamath county. This aviation story today relates development that is not told in the Bonneville report, and therefore it has a special significance as a major favorable factor not figured into the only mildly optimistic Bonneville outlook for this area.

A lot of things can happen here that are not yet apparent to the most able prophets.

For the Future

WHILE this outstanding news had not been divulged when the Bonneville people made their survey, it should be pointed out in fairness to them that they do give transportation a chance to increase employment in the Klamath basin in years to come.

Says the Bonneville report on this subject: "Transportation employment should ultimately increase after the war. As a railroad division point, Klamath Falls should benefit from increased traffic expected on the Pacific coast."

"Since 1940, the main north-south automobile traffic has gone through Klamath Falls. As the only large city between Eugene 181 miles to the north and Sacramento 359 miles to the south, Klamath Falls will probably become an important repair center for trucks and buses."

"No major air lines now serve the county. However, some lines are now requesting use of the new Klamath airport at the end of the war. (In fact, some would like to use it immediately, and some have been using it, as our story today shows.) United Airlines recently announced that it will make Klamath Falls a port of call after the war, and Western Air Lines plans to extend its line north from San Francisco through Klamath Falls to Portland, Seattle, and Alaska."

If Klamath realizes fully the apparent opportunities that are indicated in today's aviation story, and if post-war aviation generally proves to be the booming activity many predict for it, aviation can be a most substantial factor in economic prosperity and growth here.

All of this brings us today to this suggestion: "Don't sell Klamath short."

Two Mahoneys

THERE are two Mahoneys involved in Oregon politics, and some newcomers and casual followers of political news seem to be getting them confused.

Willis E. Mahoney, former Klamath Falls mayor, is the democratic nominee for the short-term United States senate position. Mahoney, although he claims Klamath Falls as his residence, has lived for a number of years in Washington, D. C., and operates a private business there.

Thomas Mahoney of Portland has been in the state legislature a number of years, and currently is the chairman of the Oregon delegation to the democratic national convention.

Both Mahoneys are strongly politically-minded, as is apparent. No love is lost between them, we are told, and it was rumored last spring that Thomas Mahoney of Portland might come out against Willis Mahoney for the senatorial nomination, if for no other reason than to confuse the situation by name duplication.

When, in 1932, Willis Mahoney ran for mayor of Klamath Falls, he was forced off the ballot because he had lived here less than one year, and came out as a write-in candidate.

This involved quite a campaign among his disciples to get them to remember to write the name correctly with an X in front of it. In fact, Willis signed his name for a while as X W. E. Mahoney to get the idea across.

A man named Maloney was running for state treasurer that year, and the returns indicated that Maloney, though defeated, got a lot of votes in Klamath county from people who thought they were voting for Mahoney when they marked an X for Maloney.

Some people told Mahoney after the election that they thought his name was ruled off the ballot, but had found it there and voted for him.

Mahoney, incidentally, got a plurality of the votes for mayor and took office after another legal fight. But that is another yarn, and we won't go into it on this hot July day.

This column has been asked to remind women of Klamath Falls that there is an educational opportunity for them in the social hygiene lectures given on Mondays at the Little Theatre in the high school building.

Dr. O. R. Chambers of Oregon State will speak next Monday afternoon on the subject, "Do Adolescents Need Parents?" These lectures are sponsored by the League of Women Voters and are open to all adult women of the community.

The War Today

IF further proof were needed of the desperate straits of Hitlerdom it would be found in Nazi Minister Joseph Goebbels' latest publication which the United States office of war information describes as "an implicit appeal to the United States and Britain to soften their demands for unconditional surrender."

Goebbels' plea is contained in an article distributed by the official German DNB agency and recorded in this country by the federal communications commission. It isn't by any means the first effort of its kind made recently by the Hitlerites, since there have been at least half a dozen feelers put out by Berlin. However, it represents a monumental display of brass, coming as it does on top of the Nazi threat to "turn Europe into a maelstrom of destruction" in an attempt to make the allies come to terms.

WAGE ORDERS EXPLAINED AT BOARD MEET

Wage stabilization laws as they affect the farm labor situation in the Klamath basin were explained at an informational meeting held at the Merrill high school auditorium Friday night, sponsored jointly by members of the Oregon and California wage boards.

One purpose of wage stabilization is to decrease rumors of high wages elsewhere and to discourage agricultural workers from going from place to place with a speculative chance of getting more money, it was stated by Carl Izet, chairman of the Oregon wage board.

WHEAT

CHICAGO, July 15 (AP)—Commission houses dominated the wheat market today, buying the September futures and selling the December and May contracts. Prices held firm despite the weakness of July wheat in the Kansas City market where the price declined to the buying level set by the Commodity Credit Corporation. The local trade was extremely small.

Why They Want In

"After the war, everybody in Vienna expects to come to America." So sounded the message from over there.

And what is it that makes this good land of ours so worth while to the peoples who live outside America? The answer is that here dwells a people who seek out God's will, to know it and to do it. They are his purchased possession, bought with the blood of Christ and indwelt by the Spirit of Christ. They hate sin, are separated unto Christ and live by Power From On High.

Some of them had but a feeble, flickering spark of faith when they turned to God. They knew their sinful state and believed the Bible—that the blood of Christ would wash away their sins and that He would indwell them with Himself.

Through these people, God set down the foundation of our schools, hospitals and the things that make America different. And yet only as Christian is in the land, can these blessings live and prosper. Our fathers held close to God and the Bible and prayer; through them God blessed a people who will turn to God, that America may continue to stand?

ONE BAPTISM

IN THE same sense that there is one GOD, one LORD, one SPIRIT, one BODY, and one FAITH, there is one BAPTISM. We do not argue that we have the privilege to worship the God of our choice, why then should people reason that they have a choice of baptisms when the same text that says there is one God, says there is one baptism.

Some contend that Holy Spirit baptism is the one baptism of the New Testament, but in addition to what is claimed to be Holy Spirit baptism, they also practice water baptism. This is inconsistent with New Testament teaching which says "there is one baptism." It is either Holy Spirit baptism or it is water baptism. There was but one baptism in force at the time Paul wrote the Ephesian letter. Let us examine the scriptures to see if they teach that Holy Spirit baptism is the one baptism.

First, the Holy Spirit baptism was a promise, not a command. No man was ever commanded to baptize any one with the Holy Spirit, nor was any man ever commanded to be baptized with the Holy Spirit. The baptism of the Holy Spirit was a promise. Jesus said to his apostles, "For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit." (Acts, 1:5). The purpose of the Holy Spirit baptism was that the apostles might receive power, to bear witness of the Lord. "But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and Judea, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." The promise was fulfilled when the Holy Spirit baptism had been given to those to whom it was promised. Jesus was the administrator of Holy Spirit baptism. We have no record of any apostle ever administering Holy Spirit baptism, yet Paul baptized, then said in Eph. 4:5 that there is one baptism. Surely he would not administer water baptism, and say there is one baptism, if the Holy Spirit baptism was still in force at the time he wrote.

In the great commission Jesus commanded his disciples to "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28:19, 20). Jesus promised in this commission to be with his disciples always, even to the end of the world, on the condition that they taught and baptized, and taught others to teach and baptize. So in all of the cases of conversion recorded in the New Testament people who were taught the gospel of Christ were baptized. That the baptism with which they were baptized was water baptism is evident from this text: "And they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." "There is one baptism."
