armor and infantry penetrated during an early morning fog which confused friend and foe alike. A mile and a half north of Noyers, they captured Vendes, and in the course of an advance of 21 miles to Noyers they took the village of Haut Des Forges, one-half mile east of Noyers.

42 Tanks Out—Forty-two German tanks had been knocked out in 24 hours in the heavy fighting around St. Lo and Caen, 30 of them claimed by the Americans, and the Germans declared Dempsey was attacking with several divisions.

Five Divisions—Caught off balance by the British thrust which began Saturday night, Marshal Erwin Rommel threw five divisions into the battle and one of the biggest contests since the invasion of Normandy promised to develop as Dempsey sought to broaden his offensive out of the Normandy peninsula.

Thrust West—The British second army pointed its thrust west as well as south from its sector southwest of Caen in a drive to iron out the enemy wedge between Noyers and allied-held Caumont. A maximum gain of near 21 miles had been made since the jump-off.

Move Failed—This broad flanking movement against Caen failed early in the morning. A later frontal attack took Caen itself, but a subsequent close flanking attack southwest of Caen to drive the Germans out of the southern suburbs of Caen last week made little headway. Now the British were reverting to their original plan.

and back. A few years after that came WATERLOO. After Waterloo came the Congress of Vienna, where the indispensable men of Europe came together and made a peace that wrecked for years to come the TRUELY liberal aspirations that arose out of the French Revolution.

PEACE that is made by a few indispensable men seldom lasts. Peace, to be ENDURING, must rest on the solid foundation of the understanding and consent of WHOLE PEOPLES, all of whom have a hand through the workings of an informed public opinion in its making.

BUT let's get on with the war. It looks as if the main Russian purpose now is to cut off the Baltic states and gain full access to the Baltic sea. They seem to have plenty of strength along the whole eastern front and whenever the Germans weaken themselves ANYWHERE they hit hard.

THERE'S an interesting story from Moscow. The Russians march 57,600 German prisoners through their capital. A million Russians line the streets to watch. There are no displays of emotion—no booing, no catcalls, no shouts. Just grim interest in the spectacle.

miles from the heart of the big port. Simultaneously other American forces slammed forward in the Era valley to within five and one-half miles of the Arno river in a broad flanking movement west of Livorno and Pisa.

Counter-Attacks—The newest gains brought the fifth army up against strong German defensive positions and fierce fighting raged all along the front, with the enemy launching sharp counterattacks. An official announcement said French troops of the fifth army, which were credited with capturing Poggibonsi over the weekend, had driven back one heavy counterattack and were holding to their positions.

Fight for Possession—It was the first indication from an allied source that the Germans still were fighting for possession of Poggibonsi, although the nazis twice had claimed recapture of the road junction town since it first was entered by the French on Bastille day.

Follow Retreat—Charging on from this historic provincial capital, of 63,000 population, the British fanned out north and west of Arezzo on the heels of the enemy retreating toward the Gothic line.

Pravda Criticizes GOP Platform

MOSCOW, July 17 (AP)—Pravda, organ of the communist party, published today an article criticizing results of the republican convention calling the party leaders reactionaries and asserting that "rumblings of the ancient past can be heard" in the foreign policy plank.

The article, by Foreign Editor Jacob Khavinson, former managing director of the news agency Tass, said: "Exactly the same arguments were presented by the republicans in the election campaign of 1920."
