Beauty IS YOUR DUTY
By RITA WHISENANT

NO matter how punctual you are when it comes to keeping a date, you're still a "straggler" if you let stringy, oily locks or wisps of hay-dry hair spoil an otherwise charming appearance. If you're not exactly holding the purse-string... as most of us aren't... it's perfectly true that you can't just up and run to the beauty shop every time you need a shampoo and wave.

IF you can, you're lucky—and if you're a smart gal, you'll learn a few things about taking care of your hair at home, thus saving a little now and then for that rainy day when you COULD use a bit of cash. Quite aside from that, really intelligent women learn everything they can about self care and home grooming. Knowing how to take care of yourself and your own appearance is just one of the marks of today's modern, independent women.

THERE'S the matter of brushing your hair... you DO, don't you? Because your chances of having really lovely hair aren't one half so good if you're not making a practice, daily or nightly, of brushing... and more brushing.

HERE'S a tip on procedure, too, that you may find very helpful! If you have ever dry hair, you should brush your hair from the scalp downward to the hair ends, thus pulling the natural hair oil down the length of the hair where it is most needed. If your hair is too oily, just reverse the method and brush the hair upward and away from the scalp, so that, in spite of the stimulating brushing, you won't be encouraging a greater oil flow to hair strands already over supplied.

OF course, our shelves are lined with beauty aids for the scalp and hair, but let's just keep thinking about BRUSHING now.

We're Not Down to Our Last 'Thank You!'

WE CAN'T always get as much merchandise as we want—and this troubles us greatly. For, as you know, our greatest desire is to serve the public just as faithfully as we possibly can.

BUT, even in these abnormal times when everyone is making sacrifices, we feel that not only in the interests of good business—but in the interests of homefront morale, as well, cheery and courteous contact with our customers is essential.

THAT'S WHY it behooves us to keep smiling and try to make every customer happy. And even though we don't have price ranges, sizes and colors to meet every individual requirement, our "Thank you for coming in" must be just as warm and cordial.

THANKS for being so patient and understanding and doing your best. This is the spirit that builds lasting friendships—and permanent jobs.
