

WOL WEATHER MOVES TOWARD TORRID EAST

By The Associated Press
 cooler weather and drought-ridden rain moved leisurely toward today to the rescue of Atlantic seaboard states, from Maine to Kentucky, which had been locked in the torrid grip of record-shattering heat waves.

Western weather bureaus consistently and uniformly forecast within periods ranging from eight to 36 hours. The long heat wave, accompanied by drought conditions, scorched crops, turned timber into tinder boxes and left dazed, perspiring discomfort throughout the nation.

The Washington weather bureau said: "We expect this is the last hot day throughout the western states where the hot weather has been in progress for last week or 10 days."

We expect showers and thunderstorms to be general through the area from New York state toward Virginia and Tennessee this afternoon, tonight and Friday, followed by several days of pleasant cool weather and some rain tomorrow night and continuing over the weekend.

We expect that during this week the highest temperatures each day will be comparable with the lowest temperatures that have occurred in the weather.

Reports of cooling showers and temperatures in the 50s came in from the parched midwest, thermometers on the Atlantic seaboard started their daily climb.

In its seventh day of the 90-degree temperatures, expected to drop to 86 degrees, with a break "much cooler" tomorrow when a different air mass is expected to hit the area.

New York and vicinity, after a night of squirming under an oppressive, humid 86 11 a. m., and anticipated 90 degrees before the promised relief tomorrow.

The forest fire hazard led the New York state conservation department to remove all men in the lumbering business from the parts of the Adirondack mountains. Low humidity and the weather has been the cause of scattered forest fires in several sections of the state.

Hull Refutes Dewey Charge On World Peace Conference participation in peace talks that not be allowed to fall apart through domestic political controversies.

The whole bottom could drop out of plans for peace, Hull said, if that happened.

Stresses Inter-Dependency
 Asserting that the prosperity, welfare and the true interests of all free nations are tied together, Hull said the safety of the large nations is irrevocably tied with that of small nations and vice versa. Nothing more patent than that, he said.

The secretary traced American studies on plans to prevent repetition of what he termed the unspeakable experience, through which we are now going, back to 1841 and said there have been innumerable conferences with congressmen and leaders from all sections of American

Dulles Confers
 In response to a question, Hull said that John Foster Dulles, who is an adviser to Dewey, had come to the state department to join in those talks.

Hull's statement and press conference comments which came as proposals for a sort of regional peace responsibility on the part of the big four nations were heard in advance of next week's talks.

Hull recalled that in the Moscow declaration the four nations placed themselves on record as advocating a "general international organization, based on the principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states and open to membership of all such states, large and small, for the maintenance of international peace and security."

Divorce Not Surprise to Mrs. Tweed, Says Lawyer

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 17 (AP)—Lester Penry, attorney for Chief Radioman George R. Tweed, 42, rescued from Guam after eluding the Japanese for 31 months, today took exception to Mrs. Tweed's statement that the action came as a complete surprise to her.

After the development was disclosed yesterday, Mrs. Tweed told newsmen that when her husband left for his mother's home in Oregon he had not mentioned the subject of divorce.

"Both Mr. and Mrs. Tweed were in my office to sign the necessary papers," Penry said today. "She entered a stipulation as to property disposal and custody of their child. She also signed a waiver of contest to the divorce sought by Tweed."

"Everything apparently had been agreed to by them before they saw me—including the $30 a month awarded her for care of the child."

Court records showed Tweed filed the action July 26, nine days after arriving here for a reunion with his family. Tweed's testimony was taken July 28, shortly before he left for Oregon, and the interlocutory decree was awarded Aug. 8.

Tweed alleged mental cruelty, citing incidents on Guam before she was evacuated in October, 1941, which he said caused him embarrassment. The chief's testimony referred to what he termed insults to other servicemen's wives on the island and constant association with marines. "Although she knew the anti-social feeling existing between members of the navy and marine corps."

Mrs. Tweed received custody of their child, Robert, 3. She has another son, Ronald, 9, by a former marriage. Tweed was awarded the home he purchased here 10 years ago, but Mrs. Tweed will be permitted to live there until the divorce becomes final.

reached the stage where we can hold anything back."

Aid From Europe
 He foresaw in the favorable European situation that reinforcements from that area were not too far in the future.

"But we cannot sit and wait. We never have. We have used what we have had all the way through."

Nimitz inspected many battlefields in the Marianas with Spruance, Marine Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, commander of fleet marine forces in the Pacific, and other high officers.

Building Lauded
 "In spite of the troubles you hear about back home you've got to admit they've built a tremendous fleet and airforce, a tremendous merchant marine and equipped a tremendous army," Nimitz continued.

"I think many things have been emphasized and magnified out of all proportion."

Air Help First
 Long-range air units probably will be the first reinforcements shifted from Europe to this theater after the nazis are defeated, he said.

As soon as ships can be spared they will come too, he continued. The European area is using the same type of landing craft and transports as are employed in the Pacific.

Asked if he needed more troops in the Pacific, Nimitz said: "When we get more transports we'll feel we need more troops and when we get more troops we'll probably feel we need more transports. I guess people are never satisfied."

Asked why he thought the Japanese made no attempt at air interference in the Guam campaign, he replied that they had tried it at Saipan but Spruance "completed what we think was the destruction of their naval air force."
