

SCHOOL, FARM PRIORITY FOR MATERIAL EYED

By TOM REEDY
WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP)—Proposals to give schools and farms priorities for surplus war materials today hoisted a high barrier in the house to passage of one of the administration's key postwar plans.

Chairman Mansuro (D-Ala.), floor manager for the administration of the bill creating a surplus property disposal agency, strove for approval by nightfall. But he conceded that the pending amendments are of more than ordinary interest.

Rep. Tarver (D-Ga.) offered the plan to require that the surplus property administrator channel suitable goods to vocational and trade schools, without charge.

An amendment to permit leasing of equipment to soil conservation districts was proposed by Rep. Poage (D-Tex.). Mansuro served notice his forces would fight any such fundamental changes.

"To me, that's making a gift of surplus war property," he declared. "It's our duty to see that the nation gets every possible dollar out of this material."

At the same time the reconviction measure, as adopted by the senate, ran into fresh criticism in the house where it still is in the committee stage. Rep. Celler (D-N.Y.) led a bipartisan bloc in a movement to obtain unemployment compensation benefits up to $35 a week for war veterans and $25 for civilians for 52 weeks over a two-year period. The senate bill leaves this up to the state to determine individually.

Building and real estate will be extremely active when peace comes, it was predicted in a talk to the Kiwanis club Thursday by Ed Chilcote, veteran Klamath real estate man. He said he could foresee no deflation in real estate values, such as has been prophesied in some quarters.

Chilcote also stated that money will be plentiful and cheap for building and real estate investments. There are large funds ready to go to work the moment the unsettled conditions of war-time are ended.

The real estate man spoke disapprovingly of OPA rent control, stating that local or voluntary control would be more far to all concerned. A moderate increase in returns to property owners, along with the general increase in wages, profits, etc., is not out of line, he said.

GREETINGS FLOWN ACROSS ATLANTIC

SEATTLE, Aug. 18 (AP)—When "Five Grand," the 5,000th Seattle built Flying Fortress, rolled from the Boeing plant with thousands of workers' autographs as its unique "camouflage," it bore the greeting, "Hi, Don," on an engine covering.

It was a salutation from William G. Beier to Pvt. Don C. Bowman of Eugene, Ore., former Boeing employe.

A news release received here from a service command station in England reported that Bowman got the message in person. Five Grand was crippled on its maiden flight over Germany. By coincidence it made a belly landing at Bowman's station and he was in the repair crew assigned to it.

Battle Over Vet, Union Seniority Out In Open

By GARETH MUCHMORE
NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (AP)—A developing conflict between union seniority and veterans' preference in the rehiring of ex-servicemen was out in the open today after a debate between a selective service official and a union representative.

Employers were left in the middle, still apparently caught in the crossfire of union versus selective service interpretations of the selective service law.

Col. Paul H. Griffith, chief of the veterans' personnel division of selective service, contended in a discussion yesterday before the national industrial conference board, that a returning veteran "is entitled to his old job back even though he displaces a man with greater seniority."

Victor G. Reuther, assistant director of the war policy division of the United Auto Workers (CIO), told the private research organization, made up chiefly of employers in industry, that such a policy seemed "foreign to the intent" of the act, and it would "be a big mistake to get jobs for veterans by taking them away from someone else."

Reuther asserted the interpretation of the act would create dissension pitting veterans against civilians, and would give veterans "superseniorty."

Griffith declared he was for "superseniorty" for veterans.

Reuther contended that the law provided only for "like seniority" that is, that military service should be added to work seniority, and that a veteran would contend for jobs on an aggregate seniority basis.

Griffith cited the law saying a man is entitled to his job back if: 1—He reports within 40 days; 2—His discharge was honorable;

3—He is qualified to do the work; 4—The employer's circumstances are not changed radically.

Those conditions met, Griffith said, a "returning veteran gets his job even if this means discharging a non-veteran with more seniority."

Stark, chamber secretary. Persons desiring office help are urged to contact the chamber of commerce office.
