News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—No private telephone or backoffice appendages were involved in the Hull-Dewey front page jockeying on world peace.

The participants spoke all they had to say in headlines. But the refined politics, the subtle parry and thrust, were neglected in the reports, although these established Dewey in a new international character and will be of estimable importance in the campaign.

MALLON

The administration's campaign policy has been to play Dewey to the public as a barefoot boy in international affairs, without experience or ability for leadership. To tear down this conception has probably been the most difficult technical task of the republican leadership, because by common understanding (without any agreement whatsoever) partisan discussion of war or peace has somehow been made taboo.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt has been using war and peace developments as his justification for the fourth term. In fact, this has been his whole campaign thus far.

Some months ago I wrote that he intended to go to Europe to campaign from the peace table, but I understand now he may go to Chicago first.

Perhaps the Russians may not have desired to talk definite post-war political arrangements at the top man level, at this time. Possibly our conquest of the nazis may not have moved as fast as expected. Either event, this current Dumbarton Oaks conference of ambassadors and undersecretaries may not be over when the European war is over, and Mr. Roosevelt might have to talk to Churchill alone in Europe, rather than have a big conference before election.

Was Hull Pleased?

THE Dewey developments fairly well broke into this general line of Roosevelt's campaign. It happened this way:

The Russian plan for an international air force under a world organization bestirred Dewey to speak out against domination of the world by the big four nations to the detriment of the smaller ones.

This is a subject closer to State Secretary Hull's heart than to Churchill's or Stalin's and Hull may have secretly welcomed this help from an unexpected source. But he handled the matter in accordance with the administration campaign strategy, retorting that Dewey did not know what he was talking about, suggesting that if Dewey came down here he would see there was nothing secret in the conference.

This was supposed to shut Dewey up, but he accepted an invitation which was not seriously intended, or even formally offered and he came forward to fill it with an international adviser of recognized experience equal or beyond that of Mr. Hull (longer anyway). He demanded that the big four keep their armies out of world economics and submitted the first concrete proposal for post-war action that went beneath the surface of generalities.

Dulles Outstanding

GEORGE FOSTER DULLES, his mentor, wrote the peace program for the Federal Council of Churches and the American Bar Association, two elements which could just about elect Dewey in this church-going, middle class nation, if the race were close. At any rate he is an old League of Nations man, whereas the administration had set up a campaign against Dewey as an isolationist.

Furthermore Dewey put his shoes on and demanded internationalization of the Ruhr valley, something specific and far beyond the general agreeing-to-agree expected from the Dumbarton Oaks meeting.

What more equal or fairer justice could be prescribed than that the area, formerly run by an international syndicate of French, Belgian and German business men until Hitler stole it from them, restore with its resources the damage Hitler has done!

The French tried to make the Ruhr pay for the last war. The Germans always outmaneuvered them. Even after the French moved their armies in January 11, 1923, they were unable to get lumber and coal reparations promised, because of German passive resistance.

The Germans finally got the Dawes plan, whereby they made others pay their reparations to the French, and, if I am not mistaken, they borrowed money from us for that purpose.

Willkie's Bruised Nose

FINALLY the French got 490 million marks in cash and 491 millions in goods at an expense of 184 millions of the Ruhr, but the internationalization of that area now would not only destroy the roots of German war power (leaving them only 20 per cent of their coal and iron production) but it could be made to pay some of our own war debt, since we largely have financed this war.

Mr. Willkie has acted like a bear with a bruised nose, and this has not required acting ability. First Mr. Roosevelt tried to get Willkie's following by inviting him to come to the White House. Now Dewey invited him to Albany.

He went neither place, but he spoke of "our party" in his telegram to Dewey, while he is supposed to have told Mr. Roosevelt he did not intend to get roped in politically.

Now the game here is to draw Messrs. Dulles and Dewey into definite commitments as they have come thus far. Some republican senators fear their candidate will become involved at Dumbarton in specific arrangements which will not prove popular. I do not think so, (specific agreements are unlikely), at least I believe Dewey's intention is fully to protect himself. To date, anyway, Dewey thus has adroitly moved to dispel the administration campaign illusion of his incapacity and isolationism and interposed upon the basic Roosevelt campaign scheme. In short, he has put his shoes on—and kicked.

Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

MY wife, who is my most ardent (and maybe my only) well-wisher, says I should start this column with something "light" and work my way into more serious stuff gradually. So here goes on something that's been on the list for several days but has been sidetracked for things of seemingly more importance:

EPLEY

That numbers layout which appeared in this column the other day, purporting to show how the war will end at 2 o'clock September 7, brought us plenty of calls from discerning readers. They recognized it for what it is—an ingenious trick.

It showed, for instance, that Franklin Roosevelt was born in 1882 and is 62 years of age. He took office in 1933 and has been in office 11 years. Adding 1882, 62, 1933 and 11 gives 3888. One half of 3888 is 1944, and one half of that is 972—the 9th month, 7th day, at 2 o'clock.

Franklin D. Roosevelt has nothing on you. Take your own birth date, your own age, the date of any notable incident in your life, and the number of years that have elapsed since that occurrence, and you, too, will add up figures to 3888. Do the dividing by two, and your life, too, will show that something big should happen on September 7 at 2 o'clock. (9-7-2).

Your birth date plus your age totals 1944, of course. Your marriage date plus the years you have been wed totals 1944, of course. Twice 1944 is 3888 and half of 3888 is 1944 and half of 1944 is 972.

Some readers got downright mad when they saw through this one. One of them (we suspect one W.W.) actually wrote anonymously to a Portland paper about it and suggested that some editors ought to be hung on September 7 at 2 a. m. This angry gent obviously had in mind a Klamath Falls scribe whose name and office title (see masthead above) have the same initials. You know who: me. There we go, getting tricky again.

Pride and Sorrow

PARIS today is back in French hands. It was captured from within, by Frenchmen. But their triumph was made possible by the great Allied successes since D-Day, and a lot of the boys you and I know—Midland empire boys who've been gone from among us for a long time—participated in those successes. Some of those boys will never return to us.

Rejoicing which accompanies each major milestone on the road to complete victory over there is highlighted with local pride and tempered with sorrow. The bitter cost of war is never erased by its triumphs.

No Lull Ahead

KLAMATH FALLS is one of the major construction points on the coast, due of course to the extensive military installations established here within the last year. Construction news from this town frequently dominates the pages of the construction trade papers of the big coast cities.

While work is still fairly extensive at the Marine Barracks, the naval air station, and the federal housing project, other projects—which would seem large in normal times—are just getting started.

This week, for instance, contracts are being let on school buildings at Bonanza and Dorris which replace school plants destroyed by fires last school year. These jobs will provide employment for a considerable volume of labor, and they will give the two nearby towns excellent new school plants that can be used for many community purposes as well as education of the youngsters.

The major harvest season is approaching and will require a vast effort and an unprecedented volume of labor.

This is a busy town in a busy trading area. There is no prospect of a lull in the near future.

Nail Driving

HERE'S a sidelight on circumvention of OPA: New lumber, but not used lumber, is under freeze orders. A local man who says he knows it's true claims that nails have been driven in new lumber here to make it salable as used lumber.

Keeping men busy putting nails in and pulling them out again is reminiscent of the across-the-road leaf-raking of WPA days.

Free Enterprise Lives Again

TIME was when it was an hour's job to get a shoe shine here, but recently, things are looking up in that department. A lot of small boys are in the business on the streets, and a sailor or marine leaning against a building while an urechin brushes up his boots is a fairly common sight.

Furthermore, there is evidently a price war on. We were solicited on the street yesterday by a lad who offered a shine for 15 cents. His competitor, not 10 feet away, called to us that he would shine 'em for a dime.

That breath of free enterprise was refreshing.
