

WHEAT PRICES CONTINUE ON DOWNSWING

PORTLAND, Aug. 30 (AP)—Cash wheat prices at Portland continued on a downward trend the past week, losing 1 to 3 cents a bushel compared with a week ago, the war food administration said today.

Weakness in cash wheat here was generally attributed to the extremely slow demand from all classes of buyers at coast terminals. Mills appeared uninterested in wheat except high protein hard whites.

The CCC was in the market with support prices of $1.45, but this was not sufficient to maintain values, the WFA said. Growers, however, are not selling appreciable amounts of wheat, since the current bids are now below loan levels.

Considerable wheat was reported being placed under loan. Wheat receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals were seasonally heavy at about 126,000 carloads, of which Portland had 50,700.

These receipts were reported, including largely CCC stocks and wheat for terminal storage since the CCC support price is based on wheat in storage at terminals with coast transit.

New flour bookings by mills were reported small. Favorable war news tended to limit purchases of all grains largely to immediate and nearby needs.

Winter wheat harvest in Oregon is nearing completion and much spring wheat has been harvested.

COFFEE'S BEEN AROUND

Brazil furnishes about two-thirds of the world's coffee. The coffee plant, which originated in East Africa, traveled to Arabia, to Amsterdam, and to Java before it reached South America.
