Private Contracts Demanded by AFL For Power Projects

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 31 (AP)—The AFL demanded today that new construction on the Bonneville and Grand Coulee power projects be done by private contractors.

A resolution passed by the AFL building and construction trades councils of Oregon and Washington condemned the use of Bonneville administration maintenance employes for construction work.

O. G. Harbak, executive secretary of the Columbia Power Trades council, said federal employes—not covered by unemployment compensation or social security—do not have as favorable employment conditions as if they were working for private contractors.

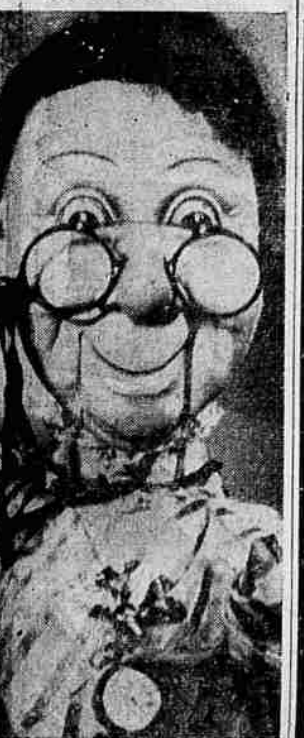

Isolationism Cause Of War, Says Smith

PENDLETON, Aug. 31 (AP)—A third World war can be prevented only by avoiding isolationism, Edgar W. Smith, Portland, said here last night in opening his campaign for election to the U. S. senate on the democratic ticket.

He predicted a farm products glut in the northwest and the nation when European countries return to production. For Oregon he urged greater industrial development and added use of power, irrigation and navigational possibilities as aids to increased employment and commerce.

He said he represented the conservative and constructive element of the democratic party, and termed the opposition of the CIO political action committee an inverted compliment.

around and bawl us out. Swift Healing

The amazing thing to me was the swiftness with which the human body heals. They came in on stretchers looking as if they would never walk again, and in a few days they would come out, with a bandage on, probably, but up and walking around and raising hell to amuse themselves.

The stories they tell are fascinating. Most of them had been flown back from Normandy, and I could practically tell you everything that happened to them from the time they went in until they got it. Whoever said they don't want to talk is crazy. They all want to tell you about every minute, and they do. They all agree that nazis are tough customers, but only one type, the Hitler youths, seems to make them mad—they refer to them as "Oh, these goddam jokers," and then spit. Probably the funniest stories they tell are about how they fixed up their foxholes in the rest areas. Some of them sounded quite palatial, with lace curtains, etc.

Amazing House

This house where I'm living is a most amazing one. Poor Mrs. Harrison (my landlady). There is always a crowd of people sleeping around somewhere. And the number who turn up for meals is fantastic. I don't see how she does it. She does all the housework, in addition to keeping four greenhouses, picking the fruit and doing the garden work—and in addition taking care of Tine, her three-year-old granddaughter whose father was killed in the battle of Britain and whose mother works for the Red Cross somewhere in England. She still

Great Moment Brought About by Arrival of Trunk

By MARY JANE JENKINS

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 20 (By Mail)—This is one of the minor great moments. My trunk (foot locker, in these parts) finally caught up with me, and I've just finished unpacking it. Outside a bit of bilge water and millions of bumps and abrasions, it looks pretty good.

Among other things, it contained the typewriter on which this is written, which warms my heart. I know now I could have gotten along without the rest of the junk, as I've been getting along fine with only a suitcase, but it is rather nice to have a uniform jacket that fits—the one I was wearing never did get fitted in the hurry of departure and would have held at least three ARC girls.

Whoever said the Red Cross clubmobile girls work wasn't just whistling. My hands look something like a lady welder's and I am so used to running around in a shirt that is clean about five minutes at the start and then wilts and catches everything from doughnut grease to the large greasy handprints of the boys who come up and clap you on the neck with one hand and spill coffee on you with the other that I don't even notice, it any more.

Day Off

At this moment, I am having a day off and am sitting in the front yard in a pair of shorts, having a terrific time concentrating because the boys are roaring by overhead and I love to watch them. I've just come out of the hospital, where they slapped me when I showed signs of a cold with an accompanying temperature. Every time I turned around they X-rayed me, took out quarts of blood, etc.—all just routine, for army records. Let me assure you that these boys really get taken care of. Anyone who gets out without having been X-rayed from head to foot and practically stabbed to death with needles is shirking his duty.

I really had a wonderful time of it, because I felt marvelous after I got over my cold and spent my time visiting all the wards, playing bridge with some fliers who were sharks and decided to teach me, going to the movies and sun-bathing. Then, when I got home, the ARC gave me a week's layoff, which I understand is mandatory when you've been off the beam physically, and I've sat around having breakfast in bed, bicycling over the country and generally being a lady of leisure. My room mate and I forgot to renew our food ration cards, so we have been reduced to eating lunch and dinner at whatever army mess we can find in the vicinity. I can now answer one question that no doubt is burning in the minds of those on the home front, namely: What has happened to all the fruit cocktail and canned carrots? They're all in the ETO, and don't think we don't know it! Army food is good, however, although unattractive. The mess boys simply knock themselves out being good to us, which means we get five times what we can eat, all piled on one plate. Salad with gravy in it has become one of the things I'm fondest of.

(Note to the linotyper: If you can't understand this copy, it's because my typewriter is balanced on a stone table made out of an old mill wheel and it keeps falling into the holes.)

Kleenex Rationed

Speaking again of rations, you may be interested to know that Kleenex here is rationed to one small box every eight weeks, candy bars three times a week and seven packs of cigarettes a week. Soap, one small bar every other week. So, if you're short at home, don't think these things are running out of the GI's cars. If any gal joined up just so she could buy Kleenex, she's fooled. The hospital was fun. They have no women's ward at this particular one, so I had a little

The boys spent most of their time in the mornings watching me get up and wash my teeth and eat breakfast, and then we could start playing bridge. At 7, we went to the movies and then came back and raided the kitchen and shut ourselves up in my room and ate fast before

C OF C DISPLAYS MAILING BOXES

Reminding families and friends of servicemen to do their Christmas shopping early is a display of wooden mailing boxes in the chamber of commerce window.

The overseas boxes were donated by the Pelican Bay Lumber company and many of them are stamped with green Christmas trees. To demonstrate how the plain boxes can be made more attractive Peggy Rakestraw and Judith Brown, chamber of commerce assistants, have decorated them with Christmas designs.

Persons planning to send gifts overseas should get their boxes soon, as packages must be sent to servicemen between September 15 and October 15.

RANDOM HARVEST

NEWTON, N. C.—A farmer agreed to cut a neighbor's hay field for a share of the crop. Two days later he returned to rake and bale the hay.

In the field he was greeted by another man who told him, "Thank you for cutting my hay. With all the labor shortage I didn't know how I was going to get it cut."

The farmer had cut the wrong field.

OPA Rules to Give Appeal to Beef

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31 (AP) The office of price administration took it into its own hands today to make ration-free utility grade beefsteak "more acceptable to the consumer."

It ruled that beginning September 4, retail butcher shops may "pre-cube" or tenderize top and bottom cuts of utility steak. Heretofore they could be cubed only in the presence and at the request of customers.

The ban on pre-cubing remains in effect for the three top grades of meat and other cuts of utility grade.

OPA listed these representa-

Recipe for a Perfect Marriage

Dee and Jane Cuppers celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary last Saturday. Having so many friends, it seemed like half the town stopped in that evening to pay their respects.

Little Ida Moffat brought a home-made poem to read, called Love Enduring. Bert Childers fiddled "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Will Dudley made a speech and proposed a toast.

And as I watched that toast—Dee with his glass of beer, Jane with her buttermilk—I thought to myself: There's a recipe for live prices in living ceiling... the pre-cubed steak; Salt Lake City and Portland; Salt Lake City and Portland; 30 cents, St. Louis.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—District OPA Rent Examiner George C. Taylor, explained how a landlord or tenant should apply for readjustments regarding a renter troubled with a hurriedly gave up the house. The owner proved to the OPA satisfaction that the house was gone, too. Whereupon, the landlord, he was permitted to raise the rent.

From where I sit, Dee and Jane are a mighty good example to young married people today—an example of how cooperation, tolerance and understanding can build lasting happiness and solid bonds.
