Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY
THE Klamath Commando project is representative of something that is becoming increasingly rare—an effort by a group and a community to do a big job without calling for a lot of outside assistance, and the outside control and pattern-making that goes with such assistance.

EPLEY

To these girls and their leaders and supporters, who have shown this independence of spirit and this determination to shoulder responsibility, Klamath people owe an enthusiastic salute.
At this time, the Commando service center program is beset with a serious problem—that of developing adequate quarters to carry on in the face of increasing demands for service.

It is therefore a matter of unquestioned public interest that the Commandos "make the grade" on this problem. We think those who help them will be performing an important public service in a practical way and in the perpetuation of the ideal of local responsibility for local jobs.

Medical Problem

A PHYSICIAN friend of ours has been telling us some interesting things about wartime medical practice.
With more people in town than ever before, and fewer doctors, the waiting rooms of the various medical offices around town are daily jammed to the doors. The doctor who takes his responsibility seriously is under terrific pressure, taking scores of patients daily in a steady stream. People who go to doctor's offices often wait many hours before getting into the inner sanctum.

Human nature being what it is, there appears also to be a tendency on the part of some folks to seek a doctor's services now, regardless of whether they need immediate attention. When something is hard to get, it becomes more important. Some folks who have let a minor ailment ride along for years now haunt the doctor's sanctums as if they were in desperate and immediate need.

Forms and Letters

ANOTHER problem of the doctor is signing letters, blanks, etc., for people who have to show these things to various government agencies in order to get gasoline, job transfers, etc. Our doctor friend swears that there is enough of this sort of thing required of Klamath physicians to take up the entire time of one man. The doctors have to do it on the run, between patients and after hours.
One doctor here had an interesting experience with a government agency in the matter of a woman who was "expecting." Although the condition was quite obvious, the agency insisted on a letter from a doctor. So this doctor wrote such a letter, using the above-mentioned term, "expecting," and giving the date. The letter came back, with a report that the agency didn't understand and the doctor would have to be more specific in his terminology. He wrote another letter, using just about every combination of words in the English language that means a woman is going to have a baby.
"I guess they understood at last," he said.

Shenanigan

THERE have been cases, too, where people resorted to minor frauds to get the doctors to sign up a statement that would get them what they wanted out of a government agency.
One man, who wanted a release from his employer so he could get a job transfer to another city, sent his wife to a physician here. She had a medical record, all right, and she wanted the physician to sign a letter which would get her the gas to go to another climate

Supreme Court to Hear Arguments in Townsend Bill Case

SALEM, Sept. 8 (AP)—The state supreme court will hear arguments next Tuesday in the suit of T. Lester Johnson, Sherman county district attorney, to keep the "Little Townsend" initiative off the general election ballot.
The Marion county circuit court dismissed the suit, and Johnson appealed.
The bill provides for $60 minimum old age pensions, to be financed by a gross income tax of 3 to 5 per cent.

for a while. She said nothing about getting her husband released from a local job.
So she got the letter, and it was presented—not for gasoline—but to get the husband released from the local job.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON
WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The restoration of common sense teaching in the schools is proceeding so swiftly (and so silently) the general public is not aware of it.
With the least possible advertising and a minimum acknowledgment of error nationally, the teaching trends of more than a decade are being widely revised. The false philosophies of progressive education which corrupted the youths and encouraged juvenile delinquency with laxity of discipline are being corrected, in the east, at least, where all these trends and swings originate.

MALLON

My column of May 10 set forth the ideas of a junior high school principal in Philadelphia, who wanted to teach romantic love to 15-year-old children in special classes on sex hygiene (the lady herself being a miss.)
I do not know how she made out with her plan, disclosed in an article in the Philadelphia Teachers' association news letter of April, which said the teachers must lead the gradual emancipation of children from their parents and become "mother substitutes."

Drop Class
BUT Washington school authorities have just announced they are dropping their class in sexual education entirely. Although it never went as far as romantic love and ran only three weeks of the year, it was unannouncedly conceded a complete failure.

"The boys and girls either laughed or were scared to death," says a wise surgeon and physician member of the board of education, Dr. James A. Gannon.
Apparently Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Richmond are taking similar action. Only New York of the five seaboard cities checked by Dr. Gannon will stick to sex education this fall. They had the same experience as Washington, he says:
"Teachers as a rule are not temperamentally fitted or competent to give sex instructions. Our experimental session became a circus for the students and an impossible situation for the teachers. You might think physician teachers would be satisfactory, but they are not, because they talk over the heads of children.
"We will dispense with the sex classes which were a part of the physical instruction course and hereafter teachers will merely answer questions as they arise and furnish in the regular courses, such as biology, such moderate information as is constructive, non-controversial and helpful."
Thus are the views expressed in this column becoming prevailing and more popular (the idea that human thought is far from perfection on the sex subject, that no one is competent to teach sex, which is such a highly personal and individual problem. Not even psychiatrists have yet accepted an agreed course and no two members of any board of education have precisely the same attitude toward sex).

Unpopular Views
BUT these views were not popular then. In Boston they were especially criticized. A professor of human relations in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology wrote me that frank sex instruction had reduced stealing in Wisconsin and said:
"Sex is being taught in the schools with great success."
He was so obviously wrong as to make a reply unwarranted. If you could cure stealing with sex instruction, the education should not be limited to 15-year-olds.

The truth is a case history of the sex lives of these progressive educators would probably show them not only incompetent to teach others but even to handle their own adulthood without divorce or other extreme difficulties, which would make them about average.
One physician tells me 90 per cent of his adult cases are founded in similar facts of life. They had better first reach perfection themselves—or at least agree on a common doctrine—before undertaking to impose their ideas on others.

It seems Boston is thinking, taking hold, and acting, and not in the way of the radicals. On August 9 the business manager for the Boston school committee said discipline in the schools there was "terrible," demanding correction to cure laxities. August 10 headlines in Boston papers told of a teacher who hired a large boy in her class at 10 cents a day to maintain order because she could not. August 11:
"Teachers are afraid to tell the truth against the evil system, fear to lose their jobs; blame superintendents."
All this developed from investigation of the causes of juvenile delinquency, originally traced by this column to laxity of discipline in schools, home and church.

The progressive revolution in education, treating children as "poor dears" to be coddled against using their brains for freedom of expression, against restraint and subjecting them only to pleasant sightseeing education, weekly draws nearer its close.

P. C. Alderson has arrived in Klamath Falls to be minister at the Seventh Day Adventist church on N. 9th.
He comes from Brownsville and Sweet Home, Ore., where he has been for the past year. His wife and three children will move here when living accommodations can be found.
Opening of State School Postponed
SALEM, Sept. 8 (AP)—The state school for the blind here will be unable to open September 11 because it is unable to get six or seven needed kitchen workers, Supt. Walter Dry said today.
Dry said he would try to open about October 1, when he expects help to be available.
He said he has enough teachers, but that he would be unable to board the students until help is obtained.
TO HOLD CONVENTION
PORTLAND, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Oregon Republican club will hold its annual convention here September 18-19, coinciding with the arrival of Gov. Thomas Dewey, republican presidential candidate, party leaders said today.

Chinese to Avenge Death of Wife
PORTLAND, Sept. 8 (AP)—A Portland-born Chinese credited with shooting down six Japanese planes vows he will return to China this fall and avenge the death of his wife from an enemy bomb.
The flier, Maj. Arthur Chin, had part of his face shot away by Japanese pilots who machine-gunned him as he parachuted from his disabled plane in December, 1933. His wife was killed as she threw herself over him protectively as a bomb struck his hospital. He has been undergoing plastic surgery operations in this country.
The China Society of Portland has launched a drive for $50,000 to buy him a P-51 Mustang fighter.

HOME COMING DAY SLATED FOR SUNDAY

The First Methodist church, located at N. 10th and High, will celebrate homecoming day next Sunday, September 10, according to the minister, Rev. Victor Phillips. This will mark the beginning of the fall and winter program of the church.
The church Sunday school will meet at 9:45 a. m., when there will be classes for children, youth and adults. Newcomers to the city are cordially invited to register the members of their families in this school of religious training.
The church worship service will commence at 11 a. m. when the minister will preach on the subject, "Loyalities." A choir of over 30 voices will make its first appearance this year. Andrew Loney, Jr., is director of the choir, and Mrs. John A. O'Connor is the organist. The choir will sing the anthem, "Blessed Art Thou," by Everett Titcomb. Billie Jenks, H.A. 1/2, will play a violin solo, "Because," by Godard. Old and new friends are urged to be present at the service.
The young people of the church organized as the Methodist Youth Fellowship, will meet for class study during the Sunday school hour with Earl B.

REV. E. V. HAYNES RESIGNS POSITION

It was announced this week by the board of control of the Community Congregational church that Rev. Eugene V. Haynes, the minister, had resigned to accept a similar position with the North Congregational church of Berkeley, Calif.
Haynes came to Klamath Falls from Malta, Mont., in March of 1933. Under his pastorate here the church has made steady progress in its program of community service, religious education, social and spiritual life. The membership of the church has nearly tripled during his pastorate and by the end of the present year it will be free of debt.
During his residence in Klamath Falls, Haynes has been active in community and civic affairs, serving for one year as president of the Klamath County Public Health association and for several years as chairman of visual education for this organization. He has been active in the junior chamber of commerce and a member during all of his residence here of the executive committee of the Modoc Area Council of the Boy Scouts.
Rev. and Mrs. Haynes and their daughter Betty-Jean will return to Berkeley-October 2. Haynes served the Northbrae Community church of Berkeley as its assistant pastor and director of religious education from 1929-1935.

MINISTERS' GROUP ELECTS OFFICERS

The Ministerial association of Klamath Falls held its first meeting of the fall and winter season on last Tuesday, September 5. At the meeting officers for the ensuing year were elected. They are Bertrand F. Peterson, president; Howard Hutchins, vice president; and David F. Barnett, Jr., secretary-treasurer.
Incoming officers of the association were Victor Phillips, president; Hugh T. Mitchelmore, vice president; and Bertrand F. Peterson, secretary-treasurer.
One important item of business considered by the association was plans for a religious service of celebration and thanksgiving on V-Day. Plans will be made for a community project, in cooperation with other agencies in the community interested in sponsoring such an enterprise. Full details as to place, time and program will be made known later.
