Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

WE have heard it remarked that nothing good is ever said in Medford about Klamath Falls. That remark probably was not the truth when it was made, and it couldn't be truthfully made now. For today we have a long and glowing story about Klamath county picked right out of the Medford Mail-Tribune.

EPLEY

It was written by Bob Ruhl, editor of the M-T, who was here the other day as a member of the agricultural committee of the state board of higher education. Bob goes overboard for Klamath in everything from football to weed eradication.

We happily re-print his piece in full today, with just one little correction. He is not right when he indicates that no local credit is due in connection with the start of the naval air station here. The presence of the factors that brought the air station here was called to the attention of the navy by a local man in the navy, at the suggestion of the Klamath County chamber of commerce. Furthermore, a great deal of local preliminary work was done, and everybody here knew about the air station project before construction started. People forget, sometimes, and the "reliable source" was haywire on that point. But Mr. Ruhl's statement of a similar nature with regard to the Marine Barracks is correct, and in neither case did political pressure have anything to do with the location of the "war assets" here.

With that out of the way, let's get on with reading Bob Ruhl's swell report, remembering, all of the time, that this was written by a Medford guy in a Medford paper for Medford readers:

* * * *

KLAMATH FALLS, (By Mail)—Our last visit to K. F. was a sad occasion, — what a trimming the Pelicans gave the Medford Tigers, with the largest and huskiest high school football squad we have ever seen. Since then, we are informed, most of those boys have gone to war. Well, the present state of the war certainly indicates it.

But Klamath Falls, it is very apparent, still is getting the breaks. We have just returned from an open-air jaunt up the Main Stem, and never saw more convincing evidences of progress and prosperity. Marines from the "Barracks" and trim, snappy aviators from the big naval air base nearby—fine, keen, young-looking chaps, mingle with the well-dressed local gentry and gentresses,—soft-drink bars being better patronized than the hard-drink ones,—another big improvement!

* * * *

Reminded of "General"

We could not help but think of "General" Jackson, and how he would kick himself for the fact Medford failed to get what Klamath has received in the way of war's "unearned increment."

And sensitive and conscientious as the "General" is, he would no doubt blame the C. of C. and especially himself as its chief executive and indispensible spark-plug.

But let us hasten to reassure the "General."

Neither the Klamath Falls chamber of commerce, nor any individuals in this community, through solicitation, political pressure wire-pulling or what have you, can take credit for these two important war assets. (At least that is our information and from a very reliable source.)

In fact, construction work had started on both before the people of Klamath Falls knew anything about either. The army and navy made the decisions,—Klamath Falls didn't go out and get the two projects,—Klamath Falls merely accepted them and with thanks! (That was also true of Camp White and Medford, as we pointed out at the time, but no one then believed it. In fact, where the army and navy are concerned we have about come to the conclusion that super-salesmanship, solicitation and pressure of any kind, but particularly of a POLITICAL nature, may do more harm than good.) Far better let nature (and the war services) take their course!

* * * *

An Inspection Trip

But this isn't a sight-seeing jaunt. We are here on an inspection trip of the local O. S. C. extension and experiment station set-up, by an official group from the college, and representatives of State Board of Higher Education, and only returned a short time ago from the final survey trip.

It was hot and dusty,—not as hot as Medford but dustier,—MUCH.

But as usual that old law of compensation works,—what Klamath lacks in "dustless" hard-surfaced and gravel "feeder" roads, it makes up in water, with which to wash the dust down and off.

Water, water, water,—you should see the irrigation canals and lakes around here and get an idea of the daily run off. The problem is not, as in the Rogue River valley, to get enough water, but not to get too much. In short, proper drainage is probably Problem No. 1 on a majority of the local ranches.

Whew-w!—what a deluge of figures and facts! They started when we visited the extension service headquarters in the Post Office building at 9 o'clock this morning and have been coming in ever since. And no hot air hokum either,—but cold, hard facts,—cash register entries,—results not in pipe dreams or colored pamphlets, but in sacks of potatoes, receipted bills, dollars and cents!

In fact, it is rather difficult to avoid somewhat extravagant language in describing what the college, in cooperation with the local ranchers and county officials,—and of course the progressive people of Klamath Falls in giving these groups their moral and financial support,—have accomplished here in the past few years.

* * * *

Agriculture

An agricultural and economic revolution—and a successful one,—hardly exaggerates it. We have neither the time nor the space to go into the details,—they would make a book and perhaps Mac Hoke, our committee chairman, will write one!—but just to cite one example may give some faint idea of what we are talking about.

It was the last potato tract visited several miles south of the city. Two or three years ago this tract was so run down and weed-infested that the owner could not pay the taxes on it and it was going to the county. Instead of selling the property on the court house steps, however, the county officials made a deal with the farmer, whereby the latter, with the aid of County Agent Henderson, and his assistants, was to eradicate the weed infestation through an extended smother-cropping program, return the tract to the tax rolls, by paying what amounted at the time to approximately $20 an acre. In about two years, thanks to the modern methods developed at the college, the weeds were eradicated, the soil brought up to normal, and in a few months now that farmer will harvest a potato crop, which at prevailing prices, not only will net him a wonderful profit but this land that was only worth $20 an acre two years ago, is worth at least $150 an acre now! And that is not C. of C. promotion,—that is a FACT!

And, as before stated, that is only one item among a multitude of them.

The big point is this: Because of the cutting off of timber in the Klamath area, the consequent loss of taxes, the fact that about 80% of all the land in the county is now government owned, Klamath county was faced a few years ago with serious financial difficulties, if not bankruptcy. To support its population and maintain anything approaching the accepted standard-of-living, something radical HAD to be done. Well, something radical was done!

And it added up to this: Turning Klamath from an exclusively timber and cattle country, into a timber, cattle AND productive and prosperous AGRICULTURAL country, making the volcanic ash produce and putting it back on the tax rolls.

This "potato patch" incident above, we repeat is only one example of how this miracle was performed,—and it was (or so impressed the undersigned) something of a miracle.

And we believe that, without throwing any bouquets, or indulging in any fulsome build-ups, the plain TRUTH is,—

This miracle could never have been accomplished without the work done by Oregon State college, through its farm research and experiment station departments, combined with the hard work of the farmer in question, and the generous and cooperative support of the Klamath community, especially the loyal and public spirited efforts of the local ranchers' committee, which aided in so many ways.

* * * *

Yes, this entire day, in spite of the heat and the dust, has made a strong and lasting impression upon your correspondent,—these earnest, industrious, unassuming ranchers, working hand in hand with the county officials, and the representatives of the college; and the latter with them, surely forming a team, which from the standpoint of the prosperity and security of this section of the state, just "can't be beat."

And what is true here in Klamath county is equally true in Jackson county, as far as county agent and experiment station efforts are concerned—but that is another story and will have to be written some other time!

* * * *

Air Base and Barracks

Incidentally, we finally discovered why Klamath got both the Marine "Barracks" and the combat air base, and Medford didn't.

As before related, local solicitation had nothing to do with it. Marine and naval officers selected Klamath not because Klamath wanted THEM, but because THEY wanted Klamath.

The navy wanted the air base at Klamath because there they got the largest area of uninhabited land on the coast, and with satisfactory,—or perhaps more accurately the best,—flying conditions available. This area extends from Klamath Falls eastward through Lakeview to the Oregon line. What settlers did inhabit that territory have gotten out,—or been bought out,—so the air fighters can fight sham battles to their hearts content in that tremendous area with no property damage and no complications.

The Marine Barracks was first called a hospital, but the term has been discarded for it isn't that. No one is hospitalized there. It might be more properly termed a convalescent home, specially fitted for malaria recovery, because of the 4000 feet plus altitude.

The marines there are not suffering from malaria, but the effects of the disease, the effort being confined to putting them in perfect mental and physical shape again. They have regular training and exercises including bowling and gym work, but no military routine,—they are all veterans of the South Pacific, so don't need that. We went through their dining hall and kitchens equipped for 2000 men and judging by both they are fed almost as well as the patrons of the Pelican restaurant in town—we found this restaurant to be one of the finest and most modern in the state,—and we don't exclude Portland!—R.W.R.

GRENFELL RESIGNS

OREGON CITY, Sept. 15 (AP) Jack Grenfell has resigned as chairman of the Clackamas county republican central committee, he said today, because his job as county traffic officer will not allow him to take part in political activity.

The number of school buses in the U. S. was reduced from 93,398 in 1941 to 79,569 in 1944 as part of the wartime motor vehicle conservation program.

FAUS NAMED RECREATION HEAD AT BASE

Major Henry S. Faus, of Philadelphia, has assumed the duties of recreation officer at the Marine Barracks, succeeding Capt. Jack Salesky, who is awaiting detachment to another base.

An artillery officer in the famous First Marine division, Major Faus participated in the Guadalcanal campaign. He came here from the marine corps base, San Diego, where he has been stationed since returning from overseas.

The major enlisted in the marine corps reserve in 1935, while employed as a mortgage administrator for a Philadelphia trust company, and was commissioned in 1938.

Called to active duty in November, 1940, he served in the Caribbean area at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for six months before returning to the states and going into the fleet marine force.

His wife, the former Jeanne Goodner of New York, is now residing in California, but expects to come to Klamath Falls in the near future.

Klamath's Yesterdays

From the files — 40 years ago and 10 years ago.

From the Klamath Republican Sept. 8, 1904

When the Oregon Stage company stage was leaving Pokegama yesterday, the horses became frightened and upset the coach. The driver, Bob Garrett, was thrown out and fractured his arm. Passengers were unhurt.

The big steam dredge was brought up from the Lower lake yesterday and started work on the Moore property on the west side. H. S. Moore said it is planned to dig a canal about 20 feet wide to run logs to the new sawmill he is building, starting next spring.

From the Klamath News Sept. 15, 1934

C. H. Mueller today filed an injunction to prevent ballot places for two initiative measures—one to make the o[illegible] of police chief elective, and the other to take the police out of civil service.

Klamath county has filed a condemnation suit against the Reames Golf and Country club, seeking right-of-way for the new Weed-Klamath Falls highway.

Annual tire requirements for passenger cars before Pearl Harbor ran 40 to 45 million; civilian tire production for the first six months of 1944 totaled only six million.

Hop Crop Drops Below Estimate

PORTLAND, Sept. 15 (AP) — The Pacific coast's 1944 hop crop was estimated today at 3 per cent less than last month's forecast, and the decline blamed on drought in Oregon.

The war food administration's weekly Hop Market Review quoted the September forecast at 46,765,000 pounds — 1,665,000 pounds less than what was expected a month ago. All the reduction was in Oregon, the WFA said, because of inadequate moisture for satisfactory development.

CHURCH TO OBSERVE JEWISH NEW YEAR

Rosh Hashanah (Jewish New Year) will be observed in Klamath Falls at the First Presbyterian church at Sixth and Pine on September 17, 18 and 19 and September 26 and 27. The program for the five days is as follows:

September 17—7 p. m. sharp.
September 18, 19—10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

After services lunch will be served.

Yom Kipper (Kol Nidre)
Day of Atonement

September 26—7:30 p. m. to 9 p. m.
September 27—10 a. m. to sundown.

After sundown lunch will be served.

ALASKAN FISHING FUTURE DISCUSSED

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Sept. 15 (AP)—Alaska and the Pacific northwest turned its attention today on the isolated Indian village of Hyda Burg, on Prince of Wales island, where initial hearings opened that may affect the future of the Alaskan fishing industry.

The hearing is based on an Indian petition contending that white residents have, since the purchase of Alaska from Russia, infringed on the Indians' aboriginal rights to own, hunt and fish, log or mine all unpatented lands in a southeast Alaska area larger than the state of Massachusetts and including 2000 miles of shoreline.

Alaskans have expressed the fear that the hearings might result in the interior department taking over the direct administration of the area involved as administrator for the Indians.

TO DIRECT OBSERVANCE

PORTLAND, Sept. 15 (AP) — Harvey Wells, Portland, will direct Oregon's observance of Navy Day, which comes October 27 — the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt.

VICTORY CAMPAIGN SET BY CHURCHES

Representatives from four local churches met at the First Covenant church Tuesday evening, September 12, to discuss plans for an evangelistic campaign for Klamath Falls.

It was decided to invite C. E. Hedrick, D. D., field evangelist of the World Christian Fundamentals association, Glendale, Calif., to conduct the services, and that the victory campaign was to begin October 22.

The organizing of committees was deferred until the next meeting, which will be held Tuesday, September 19, at 8 at the First Covenant church, 823 Walnut. Pastors and friends of all the churches in Klamath Falls are cordially invited to be present and aid in this victory campaign.
