THREE PALAU ISLANDS WON BY MARINES

lean thrust toward the Philippines.

American marines and soldiers have killed 8717 Japanese on Peleliu and 1055 on nearby Angaur, a total of 9772. Fighting has raged since September 15 and the Japanese are battling to the bitter end, from isolated pockets, on Peleliu.

The three nearby islets were invaded Wednesday and Nimitz said Agesebus was captured the same day. The next day Kongaur was secured, along with the nearby unnamed island.

The landings were made under the cover of warships and carrier planes.

German blows against the Waal bridge at Nijmegen were stopped today by British infantry and American paratroops. Germans were reported holding in along the Maas river, while Britons built up the strength of their second army in its Netherlands corridor.

to Cologne, and tore through eight fortifications of the Nazi pillbox line at Prum on the way toward Coblenz.

Stop Counterblows
In Holland, British infantry and paratroops of two American divisions stopped German counterattacks against the vital Waal bridge at Nijmegen, and the fighting grew fiercer in the sharp angled wedge across the German border into the Reichswald forest.

A frontline correspondent said the Germans were digging in frantically along the Maas (Meuse) river, hoping to prolong the war through another winter. But the British second army steadily was building up strength in its 50-mile long corridor into the Netherlands.

Hit Pockets
Canadian army troops north-west of Antwerp hit westward against sizeable German pockets above that port, and Polish soldiers deepened their bridgehead across the Antwerp canal west of Turnhout, capturing Merxplas in a two-mile advance.

The battle for Calais resumed at noon, after a 24-hour truce arranged for evacuation of some 20,000 civilians. Warplanes hovering overhead swooped down at expiration of the deadline, and by late afternoon German prisoners were streaming back into allied prison cages. The siege of the port appeared nearing an end.

The German colonel commanding at Calais was said to have declared: "I have received orders from my Fuehrer to fight to the last man, and that is what I intend to do."

On the coast, Cape Gris Nez had fallen to Canadian assault and its cross-channel batteries that had made life touch-and-go in Dover and Folkestone for four hard years were silenced at last. German troops who pushed to the south bank of the Dutch Rhine opposite Arnhem were shoved back across the river last night—and destroyed the northern approaches to the bridge in their desperation to prevent a British crossing.

Extends Front Line
Gen. Ivan Petrov's combined Russian-Czechoslovak forces, driving a wedge into every important Rutenian pass, extended their strip of pre-war Czechoslovakia's frontier to 160 miles.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky scored a major success in the eastern Carpathians by capturing the Transylvanian city of Targu-Mures and crossing the Mures river line at a point within 50 miles east of Cluj, the Hungarian-annexed Transylvanian capital.

Operations of Malinovsky's forces on the Hungarian plain from western Romania were not mentioned officially here.

Captain F. E. Lewis assisting. Awarded

The men were Tech. Sgt. James Byrd, Lexington, Carolina; Sgt. Robert Belzer, Cleveland, O.; Sgt. William R. Kenney, Salem, Or.; the Purple Heart, PFC L. W. Hubin, Shell Lake, Wis., and PFC James R. Yundt, Randolph, Mass., citations.

Four companies, C, D, E and F, took part in the review along with the Marine Barracks band.

Tour Barracks
Immediately following the commissioning, witnessed from the reviewing stand by civic officials and ranking navy and military personnel, the visitors toured the center which is unique among military installations in the United States.

Most popular seemed to be the "PX," post exchange, where hot coffee warmed hundreds who had watched the ceremonies in a bitter wind, and the mess hall where marines lined up for an early 11:30 "chow."

One of the barracks was open for inspection as was the hospital and other buildings.

The Marine Barracks, in which the city takes special pride, has been in operation since late spring, designed by the marine corps and navy medical department as a training and recuperation center for marines who contracted malaria and filariasis in the Pacific war theatre.

15,000 civilians on Tinian 3700 formed a voluntary battalion of death and fell on the battlefield.

It adds: "The aged, the women and the children committed suicide as soon as the enemy had pierced the last defensive position. It was similar on the island of Guam."

An enemy like that ISN'T completely human. But of this we can be sure: The SUBHUMAN brains of the Japanese won't be able to compete successfully with CIVILIZED brains. All history proves that point.

Fatalities Increase At Grade Crossings

SALEM, Sept. 30 (AP)—There were 17 motor vehicle fatalities at grade crossings in Oregon for the year 1944 up to September 1, compared with a toll of only four for the same period of 1943, Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell Jr., said today.

In nearly all of these accidents locomotives struck cars as motorists attempted to beat trains to crossings, Farrell said.
