Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

KLAMATH has just been visited, in two successive days, by Edgar Smith, democrat, and Wayne L. Morse, republican, contesting candidates for United States senator. These chaps are unusually interesting as candidates because Mr. Smith, a substantial business man, may have appeal for some republicans, whereas Dean Morse, an educator of liberal views, has an appeal for some democrats.

EPLEY

This column, in the primary, made its choice of Wayne Morse for the long-term senatorial position open this year, and nothing has happened to change this conviction. As time has gone on, we have become more deeply impressed with Dean Morse's intellectual versatility, his great fair-mindedness, his grasp of problems great and small, and his willingness to face each issue as it comes along, no matter how politically touchy.

The particular thing about Wayne Morse which has appealed to us is pretty well summed up in these sentences from one of his speeches: "I believe that the future of all Americans lies in the success and prosperity of all Americans. There must be no pitting of class against class or economic group against economic group in this nation. Our strength and prosperity are based upon the mutual interest of all of us. We are dependent upon one another. Labor cannot prosper unless farmers and business men prosper. The nation cannot prosper if a part of the nation suffers from economic illness."

Everybody who listens and reads knows that for a dozen years, there has been a politically-motivated attempt in this country to pit economic group against economic group. This thing, carried on, can bring this nation to a chaos of factional hatreds and class struggle that will thwart our national destiny as a free, friendly people, working together toward increased prosperity and happiness.

Wayne Morse sees this great danger, and speaks out boldly against the thing that brings it on.

The Harvest Problem

AN acute crisis is rapidly developing in Klamath's harvest labor situation, as we all anticipated. Now is the time when every extra bit of help counts.

In the past few years, when this need developed, many people of the city and suburbs went out into the fields. Their assistance is surely needed again this season. It is needed right now, if it is to do the most good.

Giving a helping hand in this crisis will be a contribution to general community welfare that is personally significant to each of us.

Those Pine Boxes

THE 20,000th Christmas box for service men was handed out today in Klamath Falls by courtesy of the Pelican Bay Lumber company, whose president, H. D. Mortenson, invented and executed this swell idea.

We sometimes wonder, as we see people calling for these free pine boxes, whether they realize how it comes about that they can get them in this way. Mr. Mortenson and Pelican Bay did it, and they deserve the warm appreciation of all of us.

PIC STORY LABEL, INSTRUCTS JUDGE

SPOKANE, Oct. 7 (AP)—The jury hearing the $250,000 libel action brought by Joseph A. Albi, Spokane athletic round table president, against the American News company will be instructed, Superior Judge Donald A. McDonald informed attorneys yesterday, that the Pic magazine article upon which the action is based was libelous per se.

With such instructions the question before the jury would be the amount of damages to be awarded Albi.

Judge McDonald made known his intentions when he advised Defense Attorney Louis P. Eisner and Albi's counsel, Frances J. McKeivitt, he would admit into testimony, when properly identified, a speech allegedly made by Albi in 1935.

"We will show" said Eisner, "that when our government was officially disapproving of Mussolini in his Ethiopian adventure Albi was telling people in Spokane that Mussolini was freeing the slaves and was as great as Abraham Lincoln. That establishes that he was un-American."

Albi said he could not remember making the speech.

While on the witness stand and in response to a defense question as to his objections to the magazine article which discussed the "bundles for congress" drive sponsored by the athletic round table, Albi said: "I object to being called un-American. I object to the statement that I was a representative of the Mussolini government. It was the kingdom of Italy."

He added he resigned as Italian consular agent on June 19, 1941.

Man Confesses to Bludgeoning Woman

SEATTLE, Oct. 7 (AP)—Detective Capt. M. C. Scrafford said today he bludgeoned to death Mrs. Stella Brunelle, 39, at whose home he boarded, last Saturday morning. Bowden and Mrs. Brunelle's son, Louis Holmes Segle, 18, notified police Saturday evening they had found Mrs. Brunelle unconscious when they came home. Scrafford said the death weapon was a quart bottle of beer.

Scrafford quoted young Segle as saying that he and Bowden went home early Friday and robbed one of two fishermen with whom Mrs. Brunelle had been drinking. The detective said Bowden stated that he returned after midnight to rob Mrs. Brunelle. She was in bed.

"Stella and I had a few words, and I hit her with a bottle of beer... two or three times, then I lost count," Scrafford quoted Bowden.

About Saturday noon, Bowden said, he met Mrs. Brunelle's son but they didn't have time to visit the house to ascertain her condition until evening, Scrafford added.

THOSE DEAD BUILDERS

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—The hand that writes these lines, moves at the impulse of a heart that for several years (and still does) ache with an intense yearning to awaken the people of this community to a long neglected duty which they owe to the pioneers of the yesterdays of life, who so enthusiastically drove the first nails in laying the foundation of the village of Linkville.

Klamath Falls was built upon that same solid foundation and without that foundation this interesting city might never have existed.

The promoters of today never seem to look back to the actual builders of that foundation, but keep looking ahead to progress—and still more progress—which is, of course praiseworthy, but the indisputable fact remains that some honor is due to the pioneers who made possible the boasted progress of today.

It was this writer that pointed out the location starting at the bridge as the only place left of old Linkville that is suitable for a pioneer park to commemorate the pioneers who blazed the trail to this ideal spot that nestles between two beautiful lakes, at the mouth of the shortest river in the world.

I wrote to several well-known pioneers of today, and also to the News and Herald, (as you scribe will no doubt remember) and though I received warmly cordial answers, no action was taken to build the park, but many of the News and Herald readers were enthusiastic at the idea and people, known and unknown and also pedestrians, stopped me on the street to offer their help and others drove to the bridge to look over the location and then hunted me up and called at my studio and told me that if there was anything they could possibly do, to let them know, for they would consider it an honor to help the good work along, so that afterwards they could rest in that dear spot and know that their own hands had helped to beautify it by doing their bit. Their spirit of cooperation touched a minor key on the aeolian harp of my soul and I wanted (and still do) to see them have their hearts desire fulfilled—that of doing something really worth while, so that ever after, they could look back to it with pride. The thought that they could lend a helping hand in paying a loving tribute to the old pioneers spurred them on to offer their help in any possible way.

But now, by the irony of fate, the city fathers, being swayed by emotional pride for our boys in the service, who are so lovingly known as "the flower of American youth" have chosen the same spot for a Veterans Memorial park. Of course I, too, am proud of the loyalty of these boys, but it happens that this is the only place left of old Linkville than can be used for that purpose, for the first pioneers walked on it in Linkville days and that sort of a hollow spot. If this place is given any other name than Pioneer park, there will never be a pioneer park, for there is no other suitable place where their feet have trod. This writer is sentimental enough to want this place for a tribute, because those pioneers actually walked on it and they found it.

A veterans memorial park can be located any place with high honors, but this one spot would be a loving tribute to pioneers of all time, for it is a part of old Linkville.

My plan was to pay for the land with contributions, such as are now solicited by the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, the Community Chest, etc, and most of the work could be done by volunteer workers in groups like old time "bee's," when businessmen, lodges and "who-so-ever-will" would band together like picnics and get a big kick out of the work.

That way, the park would cost the city very little, while a veterans memorial park, as planned, would cost the city a tidy bit. This fast growing city needs several parks and building a pioneer park as soon as possible would insure the returning soldiers a lovely place for relaxation, where they can pick up the broken threads of their life and weave them into a plan of their own, for the future.

I only had in mind, a small park, reaching from the bridge to Center street, but if his honor, the mayor, would want it to extend to second street, to include the place where the Houston opera house stood, that would be an added honor for the name of Houston on the brass name plate.

When the first settlers reached this locality, perhaps they knelt on the bank of the lake or river and gave thanks to God for reaching their journey's end in safety, as did Christopher Columbus and his little band of pilgrims when they discovered this continent, and because I like to picture those old home-seekers on their knees and think of their footprints on the moist soil, I feel that it would be a sort of sacrilege, or like robbing the dead, to use this last available spot for any other purpose than to honor the pioneers who found it, and how dearly they loved it, only God knows. The thought of the prints of their feet, the work of their hands, inspired me to make this public appeal for the city officials to be kind and reconsider their decision and name the proposed park, for it would not only be a lasting tribute to pioneers of all times, but a real benediction to all those who helped to beautify it.

If every one who feels that the old pioneers should be honored, will either by the written or spoken word or by telephone, tell the mayor that they want a pioneer park, per-

Accepts Agency

James Burness, seated, accepts the appointment of Burness Motors as the representative in Klamath Falls and vicinity of Roy Burnett Motors, distributors for De Soto-Plymouth. Karl K. Burhart, of the Portland company, looks on.

Burness Motors Awarded Agency

Roy Burnett Motors, distributors for DeSoto-Plymouth of Portland, Ore., have appointed Burness Motors representatives in Klamath Falls and vicinity, for DeSoto and Plymouth products.

J. P. Burness was formerly a distributor for a brand of gasoline here, and is well-known to dealers and the public in this district. Additions and improvements are planned for the building on the corner of Sixth and Walnut, as soon as war building restrictions permit, so that automobile owners in Klamath Falls will have at their disposal a plant with car service, Chrysler engineered parts, new and used cars, gasoline and lubricants.

NAME CHANGE
 BERLIN, Ore., Oct. 7 (AP)—Christening ceremonies for this postoffice-less village, renamed

Distomo for a Greek town razed by the nazis, will be held October 28, but the scattered residents are not excited about it.

"So what?" the natives asked when they heard of the plan sponsored by an eastern committee.

"It never was really Berlin, anyway. It was Burrell Inn, and somebody got it mixed up."

Greek Drachma At Low Value

PATRAI, Greece, Oct. 4 (Delayed) (AP)—Nazi manipulation of Greek currency during three years of occupation had reached such a fantastic stage that today in this liberated fourth largest port of Greece, one American dollar is worth 300,000,000 drachma, and a one-pound loaf of bread costs 18,000,000 drachma.

Before the war the rate of exchange was 125 drachma to the dollar, according to John Moustacopoulos, who is agent for several steamship lines. Today three cigarettes cost 5,000,000 drachma.

DAUGHTER FOR DAGWOOD
HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 7 (AP)—Arthur Lake, the "Dagwood" of the films, has a new baby daughter.

Mrs. Patricia Van Cleve Lake gave birth to the baby, weighing eight pounds and four ounces, at Good Samaritan hospital yesterday. The parents named her Marion Rose.

The Lakes have a two-year-old son, Arthur Patrick.

Policy Group to Hear FDR Speech

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt today accepted an invitation to address a dinner of the Foreign Policy association New York Saturday, October 21.

The White House made public a telegram the president sent yesterday to Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, president of the association, accepting his invitation. The message said:

"The citizens of this country as you emphasize in your letter of October 4, have a paramount interest in the important issue of foreign policy. It gives me great pleasure, therefore, to accept the invitation of the Foreign Policy association to be held in New York on Saturday, October 21."

The Foreign Policy association is an endowed private research organization which studies and prepares reports on matters of foreign policy.
